Cut-Rate Canada Travel Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — Government and industry tourism officials moved Tuesday to promote more travel by Canadians at home through a package of new low-cost tours.

The program, which involves the country's two major airlines, Air Canada and CP Air, as well as railways, hotel chains and travel agents, was announced following a one-day federal-provincial tourism ministers' meeting. (See also Page 24.)

The ministers agreed at a news conference after the meeting that the program, which includes 54 tours, will not wipe out the Canada's estimated $1.7 billion 1977 travel deficit but will attract more Canadians to vacations within the country.

Industry officials said it is difficult at this point to put any dollar value on the plan.

The over-all program is to be promoted by extensive advertising in the coming weeks, industry officials said.

Among the programs are:

—Air-tour packages offered by CP Air and CP Hotels which combine domestic charter class air fares with accommodations and tour facilities priced at 30 to 40 per cent below normal.

—Train, bus and cruise tours promoted by government-owned VIA Rail Canada.The company is offering 12 tours, with at least one in every province.

—Air Canada will offer travel plans allowing tourists to rent apartments in some cities.

A discussion paper presented earlier in the day to the ministers cited rapid advances in Canadian wage and price costs as major factors in the increase of the travel deficit.

Between 1961 and 1975, Canada had a surplus on its travel account with the U.S., the paper said. But between 1973 and 1976, Canadian average hourly earnings in the hotel, restaurant and tavern business rose by 53 per cent compared with 23 to 26 per cent in the U.S.

Devaluation of the dollar last year had partially corrected that but wage costs were still 20 per cent higher in Canada, the study said.

The result by 1975 was a reversal of the surplus on travel account with the U.S. by last year, the deficit with the U.S. had reached $800 million.

Horner said the ministers agreed that governments should "review policies on wage rates in the hospitality industry."

He cited in particular the payment of premium wage rates to employees who work on statutory holidays. Some employees receive two-and-a-half times regular pay, and Horner said the practice should be re-examined.

BEER PRICE HIKED

The cost of drinking beer went up eight per cent today for fans of the bottled variety and 13.2 per cent for those who prefer draught.

Beer by the case now is $4.64, up 29 cents from $4.35. The price includes the 60-cent deposit for the bottles.

Later this week, beer by the glass will go as high as 50 cents, up from a range of 35 cents to 45 cents.

Bottled beer in pubs is expected to rise to at least a dollar.

The increases are due to a price hike by breweries which has been approved by the provincial Liquor Distribution Branch.

Lloyd Manuel, manager of the B.C. Hotels Association, said members will be encouraged to pass the increases through at the retail level and not try to absorb the costs. An official announcement of the new price structure is expected Thursday.

In Victoria, Gordon Card, manager of the Colony Motor Inn, said he expects he will have to increase his price for draught beer to 50 cents a glass from 45 cents.

Bottled beer, he said, likely would go to one dollar from 95 cents.

"We can't afford to absorb cost increases with labor costs rising the way they are. We are into a new contract period in June."

Card said the tipping structure might be altered temporarily with beer prices going to even amounts at 50 cents and one dollar.

"However it will all even out. There will no longer be a dime change from a dollar for two glasses of beer but on the other hand some customers tell the waiter to have a beer himself and now this tip will be 50 cents instead of 45 cents."

Card said some hotel managers would prefer to see a floating price for beer instead of strict controls.

Kingsview Bankrupt In Duncan

A 1,200-lot subdivision project near Duncan has been abandoned by Kingsview Properties Ltd. of Vancouver, leaving $650,000 owed to a number of contractors.

The Mount Tzouhalem project on Maple Bay Road southeast of the city was to include apartments and townhouses as well as the 1,200 single-family homes.

Liens have been filed by Wilson Contracting Ltd. and Chew Excavating Ltd. of Victoria as well as by Discovery Land Service Ltd. of Duncan.

Work began a year ago on installing services in the area.

Kingsview declined comment this morning on the reason for abandoning the project.

Democracy's Cost

OTTAWA — Tory MP Bill Clarke, an accountant, has estimated that democracy costs each and every Canadian citizen about $3.77 per year, not including the cost of elections or tax credits for political contributions. See story on Page 33.

OTTAWA FAVORS ONTARIO

Steel Beam Levy Hitting B.C. Firms

A political storm is brewing over a new federal import duty on steel beams that MPs say favors Ontario industry, especially Algoma Steel Corp. Ltd., at the expense of British Columbia industry and jobs.

The chief vocal opponent of the duty in Parliament has been Ron Huntington (PC—Capilano) who said Tuesday the duty will mean economic disaster for B.C. and underlines "a lack of regional brokerage in the political system."

Huntington said his Conservative colleagues representing Ontario constituencies, wish he would shut up because they have steel and related industry and jobs to protect.

Meanwhile, the eight members of the B.C. Liberal caucus are pushing cabinet behind the scenes to exempt B.C. consumers from the duty. Justice Minister Ron Basford, (Vancouver-Centre) is leading that fight.

The 30-per-cent duty, on top of a previous 10-per-cent import charge, applies to wide flange steel beams used in heavy construction such as office buildings, industrial plants and bridges. Main exporters to Canada are Britain, France, Japan, South Africa and Luxembourg.

The western MPs say they are angry because B.C. consumers have to pay the duty despite the province never having been a significant market for Algoma, based in Sault Ste. Marie. Algoma is the only Canadian producer of wide flange steel.

Cyril Symes (NDP—Sault Ste. Marie) said in an interview exempting B.C. "might be a compromise solution."

But Symes did not want the government to lose sight of the fact the decision was made because foreigners are dumping the product on the Canadian market at prices so low Algoma cannot compete. This jeopardized Ontario jobs.

The B.C. MPs, the provincial government, industry and union spokesmen, who fear the loss of at least 2,000 jobs because of the duty, say Algoma has traditionally been unable to meet B.C. demand for the beams.

Dominion Bridge, one of Algoma's former subsidiaries in B.C., used to import steel products from Japan too, before it closed a year or two ago.

POST OFFICE STRIKERS BACK

Canadian Press

Postal maintenance workers in Toronto, London, Ont., and Laval, Que., returned to work today after a one-day strike. But all 13 maintenance workers at the main post office in downtown Montreal called in sick.

One union official in Toronto said that although most maintenance workers were on the job today, rotating strikes to protest delays in reaching a new contract with the federal treasury board might spread to smaller centres.

The 1,100 maintentance workers in the country, members of the general labor and trades branch of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, maintain and service automatic mail-sorting equipment and post office vehicles. They have been without a contract for a year.

In Ottawa, Postmaster-General Jean-Jacques Blais said he supports the treasury board's position in the dispute.

BILLBOARD MESSAGE can't help this Kitchener, Ont., motorist and his frozen, stalled car no matter how hard he might wish it. The auto had come to a shuddering halt in front of the Air Canada sign.

Pen Siege Drags On

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Negotiations for the surrender of five prisoners and their 10 hostages at the British Columbia penitentiary continue without the lawyer who has been representing the hostage-takers.

Lawyer Marguerite Jackson said Tuesday night she had been prevented by RCMP negotiators from seeing her clients and will be denied access until the prisoners have surrendered.

RCMP Insp. Les Holmes said Ms. Jackson would not be involved in a meeting that was to be held today between three prisoners and RCMP negotiators.

RCMP Supt. Bruce Northorp and RCMP S. Sgt. Chuck Hutchinson met with prisoners Ralph Saumer and David Bennett Tuesday night, shortly before Ms. Jackson said she had been denied access to her clients since arriving at the prison Tuesday morning.

"I spoke to S. Sgt. Hutchinson who advised me that the RCMP were not prepared to let me speak to my clients again and that this position would continue until the arrest and surrender of all hostages and hostage-takers. No reason was given for the position."

Ms. Jackson said Bennett asked her Saturday to represent him, Saumer, convicted murderer Andy Bruce, Richard Wright and Steven Albert Hall. The request came shortly after they had seized 13 hostages in an aborted breakout from the maximum-security prison.

Three women hostages have since been released, leaving two male prisoners, one male visitor and seven female visitors held in the visitors' area of the 100-year-old institution.

Northorp confirmed speculation Tuesday that the five hostage-takers and some of their hostages had been involved in a conspiracy to stage an escape, which was

Tel Talks Nearly Scuttled

Negotiations aimed at ending the B.C. Telephone Co. dispute were almost disrupted Tuesday when six Telecommunications Workers Union pickets followed two company supervisors to a downtown Vancouver hotel where talks were being held.

The two supervisors left the hotel without doing their assigned work.

The report of industrial inquiry commissioner Justice Henry Hutcheon of the B.C. Supreme Court has provided the basis for negotiating sessions which include federal mediator Mike Collins.

The talks are centred around a contracting out clause, a contract that will cover 1979, and conditions for a return to work.

Justice Hutcheon made specific recommendations for the first two years of the contract but made only suggestions for the third in his report.

Meanwhile, in Victoria union officials turned down a request to allow supervisors to instal additional phones and equipment in Memorial Arena for the Canadian figure skating championships which began today.

Jack Sambrooke, president of the TWU's Victoria local, said such requests are granted only in emergencies or in instances of very special need.

He said the union considers the additional equipment not absolutely necessary for the staging of the championships.

ICBC Boss Definite: McGeer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Education Minister Pat McGeer said Tuesday a United States citizen hired as president of the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia will start work in March, despite complaints from immigration officials McGeer that has yet to prove a Canadian could not fill the position.

McGeer declined comment about a statement that he failed to supply immigration authorities with information about the search for an executive to head ICBC.

Ian Thompson, director-general of the B.C.-Yukon area of the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission, said McGeer has not supplied immigration authorities with details of the search.

However, McGeer said Robbie Sherrell, the American hired, at a salary of $80,000 a year to head ICBC, will start work March 1.

Sherrell, executive director for Europe of the Hartford Insurance group, is an American who makes his home in Pulborough, England.

Immigration authorities have the right to veto working clearance for Sherrell if they are not satisfied that a Canadian citizen could not handle the job.

Last March, the city of Prince George advertised for a building inspector for 14 months throughout Canada but found no suitable applicant. The city hired Sid Jones, a British citizen, who arrived in Prince George to take up his post but was then refused clearance to work by Canada Manpower.

Manpower said the city should have listed the vacancy with its professional services instead of hiring outside the country.

Ottawa Plans to Offer 60,000 Student Jobs

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — A $96.2-million program to create an estimated 60,000 summer jobs for students in federal departments across Canada and to place more than 250,000 students in positions in the private sector was announced today by Bud Cullen, federal minister of employment and immigration.

The summer youth employment program will offer job opportunities in various government fields, such as tourism in national parks, wildlife management and healthcare organizations.

Canada Employment and Immigration Commission will co-ordinate the activities of the 10 federal departments participating in the program.

As in the past, the commission also will operate about 300 Canada Manpower centres to help place students in jobs in the private and public sector.

Meanwhile, Statistics Canada reported Thursday that the number of available jobs in the final three months of 1977 averaged 36,700, down 30 per cent from the figure for the third quarter of last year.

The job vacancy average was also nine per-cent lower than in the final quarter of 1976.

In December, there were 882,000 unemployed persons across the country.

Nationally, there were only four vacancies for every 1,000 existing jobs in the fourth quarter of 1977, Statistics Canada said. That compared with six in the third quarter and five a year earlier.

ANOTHER 'HOT' SCRAP FOUND

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Another radioactive segment from a downed Soviet nuclear-powered satellite has been found on lake ice in Great Slave Lake, it was announced here today.

The radioactive segment was found near two segments of the satellite—one of them radioactive and the other not—recovered Tuesday.

Major Barry Frewer, Canadian Forces information officer, said officials of the Atomic Energy Control Board (AECL) and nuclear-response team members were to leave here today aboard two Canadian Forces Twin-Otter aircraft to attempt to recover the second radioactive object.

The two segments found Tuesday—now held in this territorial capital—were about 24 kilometres northwest of Fort Reliance. The second radioactive object was found about three kilometres east of the earlier segments.

Meanwhile, a Canadian Forces C-130 Hercules transport aircraft was scheduled to arrive here today to take the two objects found Tuesday back to CFB Namao near Edmonton, headquarters for the search operation.

The two segments will be placed in lead casings aboard the aircraft. After they are taken to Namao, they may be sent to the AECL laboratory at Chalk River, Ont.

Fox Kept Mum About Forgery

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Francis Fox passed an RCMP security check and entered cabinet as solicitor-general 16 months ago without telling police or Prime Minister Trudeau that he once forged a name on a hospital document to help a lover get an abortion.

Trudeau told the Commons Tuesday he always asks the national police force to screen potential candidates for high office, asking them to produce any files or allegations that might affect the appointment.

"This procedure was followed in the case of Mr. Fox," Trudeau said.

Trudeau said he learned Jan. 18, in a letter from a private citizen passed on by his principal secretary James Coutts, that Fox had signed the name of his lover's husband on a hospital admitting document to help the woman get an abortion.

Fox, Trudeau said, considered his actions "purely private matters, personal matters, and he did not feel that the implications were such that he should not join the cabinet."

The Quebec Bar Association, meanwhile, will not say if any investigation is planned into the Fox case.

No Hero, Says Druggist

Pharmacist Henry Heggelund who wrestled a gunman to the floor and held him for police Tuesday night says he's no hero.

Heggelund said a man who appeared to be under the influence of drugs or liquor had been hanging about for some 20 minutes.

When the store was about to close at 9.30 p.m., the man pulled a gun.

But Heggelund wrenched it out of his hand, wrestled the man down and knelt on him while police were called.

"I wouldn't have done this if it wasn't obvious I could get the gun. There was no danger involved," Heggelund insisted.

Police arrested a 32-year-old Duncan man and charged him with attempted armed robbery and possession of stolen property.

They said the gun was a .22 calibre starting pistol.

"He (the bandit) asked what I would think if he had come in to robe the store and what would I say if he had a gun under his belt," Heggelund said today.

"I said I didn't think it would be very good and he started to pull the gun out of his belt. I wrenched it out of his hand and got him on the floor."

Heggelund said the man's reactions were not very good.

"If he had pulled the gun at some distance and pointed it at me I wouldn't have tried to get it."

MP TEETERING

OTTAWA (CP) — Alberta MP Stan Schumacher said today he will not decide if he will leave the Progressive Conservatives until the party's national executive further studies his complaint about losing a nomination.

The 44-year-old MP for Palliser took his complaints today to a 2½-hour meeting with fellow Conservative MPs.

"I put the case to the caucus and as a result there will be further steps taken," Schumacher told reporters.

He declined to say what those steps would be. But the national executive, rather than the parliamentary caucus would be involved.

After the executive reported, Schumacher would decide if we will remain a Conservative or sit as an ndependent MP.

Schumacher said his colleagues allowed him "to make my position better known and I have a better nderstanding of Coates's position." He was referring o Robert Coates, MP for Cumberland-Colchester North and president of the national executive.

Clark has no Formal Contract - Mair

There is no formal contract between Rentalsman Barrie Clark and the government, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair said Tuesday.

Mair was responding to Clark's resignation earlier Tuesday and his announcement that he intends to sue the government for not living up to terms of his own contract and to the contracts Clark negotiated for his six deputies.

The minister admitted Clark "may have a binding oral contract."

Clark said he would take court action to enforce the contract he said he had signed with the former NDP government when he became B.C.'s first rentalsman July 1, 1974.

Mair praised Clark for his work. "He did an excellent job in a very difficult job. His is the absolute classic case of a no-win situation - no matter what you do, somebody will be unhappy."

He rejected suggestions that the government was trying to dump Clark as rentalsman.

"It is not my style. If I did not like Barrie Clark and wanted to get rid of him, I would have told him so, and gotten rid of him."

He said he does not anticipate any trouble finding a replacement for Clark because the job is now basically an administrative position.

Mair said Jim Patterson, manager of the Rent Review Commission, or commission chairman Bruce McCulloch, could easily step in on a temporary basis.

Clark said he has had no raise in his $41,000 a year salary since the Socreds took power, even though department estimates tabled in the house in 1976 and 1977 claimed he would get a standard raise within federal anti-inflation guidelines.

He said he has received none of the benefits, holiday and other leave and medical coverage accorded other senior civil servants. The same is true of his other six deputies, Clark said, adding that two of them have been shortchanged about $20,000 each since they were hired.

Clark said he had held off on trying to resolve the dispute until after passage of the new Residential Tenancy Act, which he helped draft.

He took the matter up with Mair last November, but the minister made no progress in getting the cabinet to accede to Clark's requests. He said he set Monday as final deadline, and when nothing had happened, notified Mair of his decision.

In announcing his court action against the Socreds, the former Liberal MLA said he hopes this will act as a test case for his deputies' grievances.

Clark said he has no policy differences with Mair and is not upset over funding of his office or government support for its operations. He said in order to ease the transition of office he planned his resignation to take effect May 1.

Israeli Oranges Poisoned

THE HAGUE (AP) — Israeli-grown oranges injected with mercury have been discovered in the Netherlands and West Germany and a letter signed by an Arab group said the poisoning was aimed at sabotaging the Israeli economy, officials said todey.

Five Dutch children became ill and were sent to hospital after eating the mercury-poisoned oranges last week, the Dutch health ministry said. Other European countries issued warnings about the fruit.

The German health ministry said it received a letter signed by "The Arab Revolutionary Army Palestinian Commando" claiming responsibility.

Mailed from Stuttgart, and dated Jan. 21, the lette9=i "It is not our aim to kill the population, but to sabotage the Israeli economy which is based on suppression, racial discrimination and colonial occupaton."

Citrus fruit is one of Israel's major exports, and $172 million worth was shipped abroad in 1976, mostly to Western Europe.

West German offigials said the contaminated fruit contained "pea-sized" amounts of mercury, a poisonous liquid metal that can be fatal when ingested. In some countries, sale of Israeli oranges has been stopped.

In Tel Aviv, the Israeli foreign ministry said the oranges had been injected with a "metallic substance that could be mercury." But it declined comment on reports that terrorists were responsible.

A ministry spokesman said instances of contamination were discovered by purchasers who spotted marks on the orange skins. Tests showed they had been injected a few days before.

Since it takes several weeks for the fruit to reach European markets, a spokesman said the oranges were probably injected in the Netherlands, transit country for most Israeli fruit exported to West Germany.

Th Dutch ministry said the afflicted children, all from the southern part of the Netherlands, became ill last week after eating the oranges and were taken to hospitals to have their stomaches pumped out.

The ministry said it was analyzing oranges imported from Israel, but so far no more poisoned fruit has been found.

UPGRADE LIMITED

Cost factors alone rule out the possibility that Saanich roads and sidewalks will ever be upgraded to Victoria city standards, according to Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier.

In a speech to Saanich Kiwanis, Couvelier estimated the bill for such improvements would total more than $30 million.

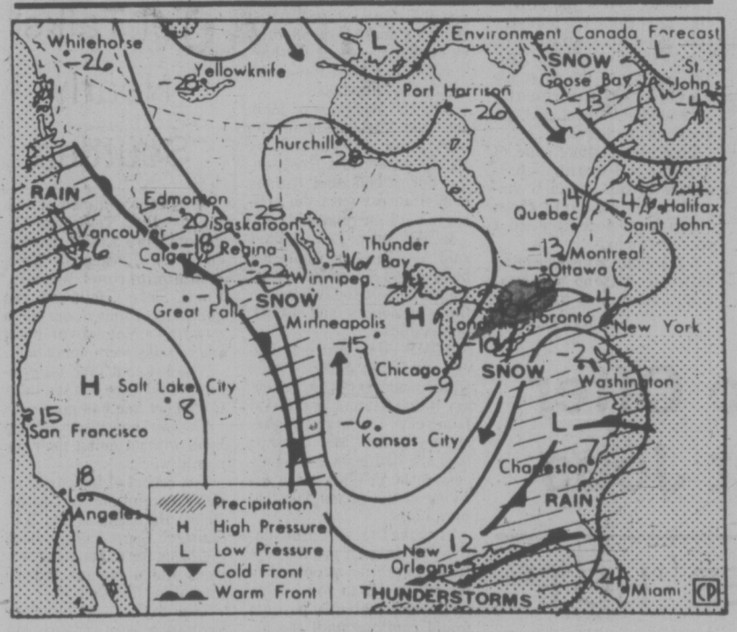

He said the municipality's indebtedness for roads, sidewalks, sewers and storm drains already adds up to $15 million.

Couvelier said Saanich has 300 miles of roads, double Victoria's total.

In road planning generally, one of the key questions facing all municipalities is to anticipate their requirements for many years ahead and to protect their options.

He warned failure to plan for the roads that will be needed at the turn of the century could see billions of Canadian tax dollars wasted.

Punk Rockers to Rescue

28 Hours Buried In Drift

INVERNESS, Scotland (AP) — A couple buried in their car beneath a 20-foot snowdrift say they were convinced they would die, until a punk rock group rescued them.

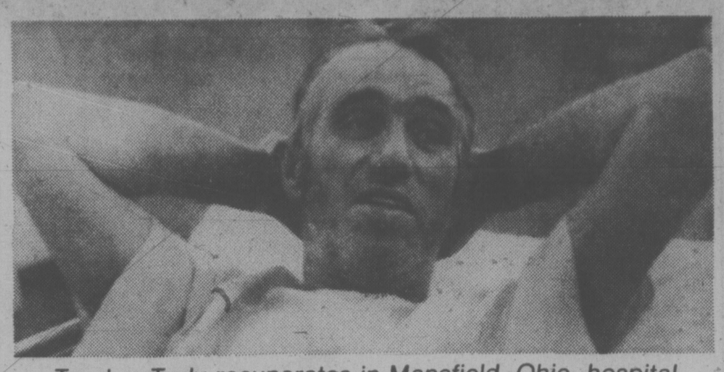

Bernard Foulstone, 53, told reporters in London that his car was buried in a snowdrift during a blizzard, one of several to sweep Western Europe in the last few days. Foulstone said he and his wife Marian were trapped Monday while returning to England from a visit to their daughter.

Convinced they were doomed, the Foulstones wrote wills and signed notes to their children. Then they heard a scraping noise.

"Suddenly we saw a lad carrying a shepherd's crook at the car window," Foulstone said after the 28-hour ordeal.

The rescuers, all members of the British punk rock group The Subs, also were stranded by the storm and spent Monday helping search for survivors under huge snowdrifts.

Mrs. Foulstone called the musicians "angels of mercy."

. . . Truly Grateful After 6 - Day Ordeal

CLEVELAND (AP) — For six bitterly cold days, trucker James Truly shivered, slept and ate snow. He was trapped in a snowdrift that had buried his rig, and no one knew he was there.

On Tuesday, he heard footsteps in the snow above his cab.

"I started beating on the roof with a piece of pipe," he said. "They heard the noise and hurried and dug down.

"I opened the window, and there was my brother," said Truly, 42. "I said to myself if anybody'd find me, my brother would find me, and he did."

Truly was caught in a blizzard last Thursday while hauling two coils of steel to a Mansfield, Ohio, auto plant.

"I couldn't see nowhere; I just couldn't see the road, so I had to stop," Truly recalled after being released from a hospital Tuesday night.

"When it got done snowing I was covered up. I couldn't even get the door open."

His world was not one of silence.

"I could hear the snowmobiles running over top of me. I could hear the airplanes," he said.

He could also hear chatter on his CB radio but could not transmit. During the ordeal, he said he would wake up periodically, turn on the cab light, listen to the radio, eat a little snow, then lie down again.

"I sat there and prayed and prayed, hoped and waited."

Truly said his brother, Donald, of Parma, Ohio, "knew the way I was going."

"He checked all the way to the snowdrift, and there was nothing. He checked all the way from the snowdrift to where I was going, and there was nothing, so he knew I had to be in that snowdrift."

Mid - East Gap Closing

CAIRO (AP) — Israeli and Egyptian defence ministers began "looking for ways to close the gaps" as they resumed negotiations, an Israeli spokesman reported.

The spokesman said the discussion at the two-hour meeting Tuesday night between Israeli Defence Minister Ezer Weizman and Egyptian War Minister Mohamed Abdel Ghany Gamassy was "practical" and went beyond statements of known positions.

Weizman and Gamassy decided not to disclose what they talked about in order to get away from "media" diplomacy, he said. But other sources close to the talks said the issue of the Jewish settlements in the Sinai Peninsula came up and that both sides expressed "cautious" hopes of evading deadlock.

The talks continue today.

They bogged down Jan. 13 over Egypt's demand that Israel dismantle the 20 Jewish settlements it has established in Sinai since it took the peninsula from Egypt in the 1967 war.

President Anwar Sadat told reporters Tuesday before the talks resumed: "On Sinai, I don't think we shall differ and this settlement problem should be resolved. The real difficulty is the Palestinians."

'Nobody Did Anything. . .'

MIAMI (AP) — Fifteen to 20 persons watched without trying to help as a woman was dragged from a bus stop by a purse snatcher, police say.

"Nobody did anything," Mrs. Dennis Sosnowski of Canton, Ohio, told police. "The driver just sat there. People got off the bus and walked away. Others got on. I was screaming. He dragged me right in front of the bus. I could hear tires screeching as cars braked around us."

The Fox Affair

Given all the circumstances, it is impossible not to be immensely sorry for Francis Fox, the former federal solicitor-general forced to resign in the latest of a series of mini-scandals that have rocked the Trudeau government in the past couple of years. The prime minister is quite right in ascribing Fox's behavior as the result of "a human failing."

But human failing or not, Trudeau was also quite right in deciding that Fox would have to leave the cabinet. Human failings that result in the forging of names on documents are not the sort of human failings that should be taken lightly in cabinet ministers — especially cabinet ministers responsible for upholding law and order through the police and corrections system.

But leaving aside entirely the emotional dynamics of the individual case, the incident brings back to mind some disturbing questions about the calibre of the team that is supposed to be governing Canada. While no one expects politicians to be any more perfect than any other group, the proportion of Liberal cabinet ministers beset with human failings in recent years seems to be remarkably high.

There was, for example, the human failing of Andre Ouellett of opening his mouth before thinking about what he was going to say — a failing which resulted in a contempt of court conviction. There was the human failing of Bud Drury who just wanted to help out a friend a little — so he made a couple of phone calls to judges about upcoming cases involving Liberals. And there have been other less dramatic examples of human failings in the cabinet.

It should be noted that at least a couple of them — the cases of Fox and Ouellett — involved persons who were considered to be among the brightest young stars on the federal horizon. The damage done to their political careers by their failings is considered to have also damaged the Liberals' future significantly.

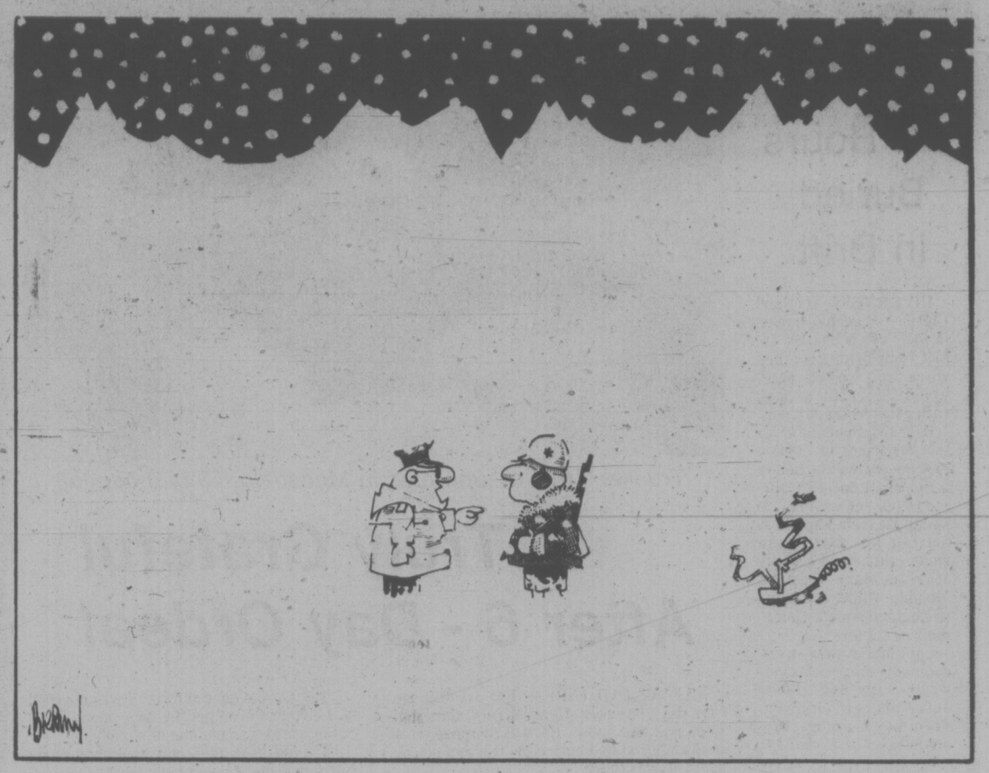

Why is it that such a number of troubles are inflicting the Liberal camp? It might perhaps be said that the party has been too long in power and has simply begun to suffer from Lord Acton's dictum about the corrupting effects of power.

But it seems more likely — and more frightening — that part of the answer, at least, lies in the quality of person being attracted to politics these days. Few top-quality Canadians, it seems, want to venture into the stagnating, smelly swamp that is politics in Canada (especially in English-speaking Canada) today. The best people this country is producing are in large measure going into law, or business, or even into academe. They are not going into government where, it is frequently felt, you are constantly submerged in a sea of red tape, can hardly get anything done, are unlikely to have much effect really on the problems of the country, and must constantly watch out for a stray alligator that might come along to bite you.

With a few exceptions, those being attracted to politics are run-of-the-mill sorts, and too often sorts beseiged with human failings.

Even at the provincial level here in B.C., the 55 MLAs, with maybe five or six exceptions, could not be described as outstanding material. Although Bill Bennett's cabinet has not been plagued with the troubles of the federal government, many of its members have said things they should not have said, and have shown more signs of political stupidity and pigheadedness than of diplomacy or leadership.

Perhaps the basic question that should come out of the Fox affair is not: What should be done about ministers who get into trouble through their sexual life? But rather: How can we attract such top-quality people to our political system that such problems will almost never happen?

RICHARD GWYN

Canada's Chappaquiddick

OTTAWA — It was almost certainly the most painful week Pierre Elliot Trudeau has had to spend as prime minister. Ten days ago, Trudeau first learned that his protege and near political twin, Solicitor-General Francis Fox, had committed an unforgiveable indiscretion. Trudeau ordered the facts checked out. Once he was certain what had happened, as his last item of business on Friday last, Trudeau called Fox to his office and asked him to resign.

Throughout that week, no one knew what was happening, except Trudeau, Fox, Federal-Provincial Affairs Minister Marc Lalonde and Trudeau's chief aide, James Coutts. The final choice was Trudeau's alone. He learned the news through "regular channels" — either the police or party sources — had the details corroborated, and then, in a private meeting in his Langevin Building office, let Fox know he would have to resign. Fox immediately agreed.

On Monday, Fox made his statement to a dead quiet Commons and immediately rushed out to a waiting car. Trudeau followed him out of the chamber and then, his eyes moist, waited for a few moments in the government lobby before going out to meet the press. The loss of "a young, dynamic and intelligent public servant," said Trudeau, "leaves me very sad."

Worked as Aide

Fox once worked as an aide in Trudeau's office. His sister, Marie-Helene Fox, still works there.

Political relationships aside, Fox and Trudeau are uncannily alike. Both are the products of French and English parents. Both are not just bilingual but bicultural. Both are intellectuals (Fox was a Rhodes scholar) and lawyers. Both combine a shy, quiet charm with a deep, personal reserve. "Enormously attractive, but very self-contained and wary," says a close friend of Fox. Both, lastly, are fierce political competitors, cool and calculating in debate and relentless in their pursuit of victory. Fox, who idolizes Trudeau, even has adopted many of his debating techniques, such as answering a question with another question.

The comparison that leaps to mind is Chappaquiddick. There, Senator Edward Kennedy's moment of panic once he realized his woman companion had drowned, blighted forever his presidential ambitions.

Fox, at 38 the youngest member of the cabinet which he only joined in 1976, had emerged suddenly this winter as a potential candidate for the Liberal leadership. Fox's skilled and self-assured defence of the government through the RCMP affair made him a household name and among Liberals, one of the government's most popular members. Many assumed he soon would move up to succeed Ron Basford as justice minister — the portfolio from which Trudeau vaulted to the top.

Abruptly, it's all over. Other ministers, like Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet, have returned after lapses in judgement — in his case, contempt of court. Fox, though, faces possible prosecution and even a jail term for signing his name to an application for a therapeutic abortion as the supposed husband of a married woman whom he had made pregnant during "a brief liaison."

Appointed as solicitor-general to uphold the law, Fox neither advised Trudeau of the incident when invited to join the cabinet, nor did he bring the matter to Trudeau's notice at any time until called to their meeting in the Langevin Building. Depending upon how his case is resolved, Fox might eventually be able to return to the cabinet.

But he could never again accept appointment as an officer of the law — solicitor-general, justice minister. And his prospects as a leadership candidate are damaged beyond repair — not by his sexual peccadillo about which public opinion is likely to be little aroused, but by his lapse from honesty and by doubts about his powers of judgment.

Damaged Prospects

During the court case, the questions that now puzzle everyone will be answered. Why, for example, didn't Fox arrange for the woman to have her operation at a clinic which did not require approval by the husband? Why, as another example, as a brilliant lawyer and parliamentarian, did he ever imagined the incident could remain hidden for ever?

After the breakup of his own marriage some three years ago, Fox, then a backbench MP, became for a time a "careless bachelor", as a friend puts it. He was as attracted to women as they were attracted to him. One became pregnant, and Fox, panicked. As did Kennedy at Chappaquiddick. Twin tragedies, except that of the pair, Fox is by far the abler, and as his friends know him, by far the finer person.

CLAUDE ADAMS

Renegades in U.S. Civil Service

WASHINGTON — In April, 1975, a government electrical engineer named Robert Tucker who thought he had stumbled on a piece of bureaucratic corruption was fired from his job.

Tucker felt his employer, a government agency called the General Services Administration, had improperly awarded contracts to favored firms. Rather than approach his bosses, he removed some GSA files and handed them over to the FBI.

The FBI investigated the case, and concluded there was no evidence of wrongdoing. When the GSA learned that Tucker had blown the whistle, they sacked him. They said he had "defamed the reputation of the GSA and your fellow employees."

But Robert Sullivan wasn't sure. Sullivan was a GSA investigator called into the case in its early stages. He studied the FBI reports and concluded that something was amiss. Then he saw an internal audit, ignored by GSA higher-ups, which suggested that $9 million in contracts had indeed been improperly given out.

Sullivan was in a spot. For six months, he agonized over the matter. He consulted a priest, and studied the code of ethics for government workers, which requires them to "put loyalty to the highest moral principles and to country above loyalty to persons, party or government departments."

Sullivan knew that raising the matter with his superiors would be futile. They had the audit in their hands. They had ignored it.

Made Copies

He made photocopies of the documents in his possession and went to the Boston Globe. The story appeared in January, 1976: Ten months later, Sullivan got the axe. The GSA conceded that Sullivan had been "altruistic and well-intentioned" but they sacked him anyway because he had gone outside the agency.

Conscience and the code of ethics were no excuse. The GSA said Sullivan's action smacked of "anarchy," whatever the motive.

The Sullivan-Tucker case is a good example of what happens to "whistle-blowers" in the U.S. bureaucracy. They are two of scores of federal employees who in recent years have gone public with what they feel are cases of waste, abuse and corruption.

For the most part, the whistle-blowers are not shielded by any laws, not even by the U.S. constitution's first amendment guarantee of free speech and right to petition. If not sacked outright, they are harassed, demoted or impeded in their jobs.

Ernest Fitzgerald is a classic case in point. In 1969 Fitzgerald, a cost analyst in the Pentagon, went before a congressional subcommittee and told of a $2 billion overrun on a defence department cargo plane contract.

He quickly learned the price of his "indiscretion." He was shifted to overseeing food costs in military mess halls, and was put in charge of constructing a bowling alley for troops in Thailand.

His career tenure was revoked, the Pentagon probed into his background, and a subtle process to isolate him from his fellow workers was put into effect. Then his job was eliminated. After a seven year legal fight and $400,000 in lawyers' costs, he finally got his status back.

The Fitzgerald case was raised by Jimmy Carter himself, 10 days before the presidential election. Carter said such a travesty "must never be repeated.

"I intend to seek strong legislation to protect our federal employees from harassment and dismissal if they find out and report waste or dishonesty by their superiors or others," Carter said on the campaign trail.

But as a thick report prepared for Vermont Senator Patrick Leahy notes, nothing has yet been done to protect the renegades of the bureaucracy from reprisal. "The specific harassment has taken many forms," Leahy says, "but the result is the same: the employee is neutralized."

Some countries, like Canada, have institutionalized whistleblowing by appointing an auditor-general who, in the best nonpartisan fashion, reports every year on government excess. But the U.S. has no such agency.

Along with two other congressmen, Leahy has sponsored a bill that would set up an independent review board to hear the whistle-blowers, check into their complaints and protect them from angry bosses.

Hearings on the bill will begin shortly in congress. It will likely get a rough ride. Conservative politicians here are still smarting from such things as the release of the Pentagon Papers, and the publication of the secret Pike Report on intelligence. They believe strongly in the sanctity of secrets.

But Leahy and his staff have their ammunition ready. Some of the case histories they collected in a seven-month study make compelling reading.

In 1976 during the great swine flu hysteria, a researcher with the food and drug administration, Dr. Anthony Morris, mounted a vocal campaign against the vaccine that was being pumped into millions of Americans.

In July, the FDA sacked him for insubordination. They said his behavior was a "direct challenge to the integrity of scientific progress and the ability of the FDA to carry out its mission."

When the innoculation program was terminated some months later because of uncertain effectiveness, Morris was at least partly vindicated. He is still appealing his dismissal.

Stack Bureaucracy

John Coplin, a meat grading supervisor with the U.S. department of agriculture, hasn't had a promotion in 26 years. It's not for want of good credentials. Coplin has taught his profession in five different universities. Three times, he was nominated for the federal employee supervisor of the year award. He has served a term on the Civil Service Commission, which handles the federal payroll.

Coplin's mistake, as the Leahy report tells it, was a tireless fight against corruption. As grading supervisor in Chicago, he worked with the FBI to uproot and dismiss 70 per cent of the corrupt graders in that city. He pointed out irregularities in the meat grading system nationwide.

"The fact that appears to be offsetting Coplin's numerous achievements is that he had offended some powerful people . . . by his vigorous attempts to stop corruption within the agency," the Leahy report concludes.

For his efforts, Coplin was kept almost permanently shortstaffed. As soon as he had trained trusted lieutenants, they were transferred. And he was kept well away from the promotion ladder.

Occasionally, whistle-blowers are subjected not to demotions or impediments, but to outright smears. Since 1969, GSA official Arthur Palman had staged a stubborn personal campaign against patronage in his department.

His charges were borne out in internal investigations. The agency, it was found, had been stacked with Nixon favorites. But instead of cleaning house, the GSA bosses turned on Palman.

He himself was accused of "racial discrimination, cronyism" and other reprehensible practices in a note that one congressman described as "potentially libelous and self-serving."

Some of the cases unearthed by the Leahy staff are models of pettiness. Like the two probationary nurses, Valerie Koster and Sandra Kramer, who were posted to the Indian Health Service facility in Shiprock, N.M.

The nurses discovered what they felt were shocking unsanitary conditions at the facility. Garbage on the grounds attracted packs of wild dogs. Their own quarters were filthy.

Koster and Kramer took their complaints through the normal channels, but nothing was done. So they wrote to the White House, a number of congressmen, and a New Mexico newspaper.

They were fired in August, 1975 on the grounds that they lacked the "ability or desire to become responsible employees of the IHS." A superior told them, wrongly, that a recent supreme court ruling had forbidden public criticism of agencies by federal employees (In fact the ruling stated that employees could be fired for lying publicly.)

The dismisals were finally rescinded last June, after the nurses were given the chance to speak on their own behalf.

Critics of the whistle-blowers are fond of terms like "team spirit" and "following due channels," and in this respect they echo the spirit of an infamous document from the Nixon White House called the Malek Manual.

This handbook, drafted in the name of Frederick Malek, Nixon's White House personnel chief, is a candid blueprint for stacking the U.S. bureaucracy with compliant political appointees. Theoretically, it would help a president steer the ship of state by eliminating all potential mutineers.

It tells how to harass bureaucrats who might stand in the way of a presidential policy or how to promote them out of sight, and how to co-ordinate a "political personnel operation."

The manual warns of initial opposition from a hostile press and a suspicious congress, but argues:

"It is far better and healthier to swallow a large bitter pill in the beginning and then run rigorously toward your objective, than to . . . stop so frequently for small bitter pills that you become drained of your endurance, the will and the ability to ever each your objectives."

Sometime over the course of the next few months, President Carter will have to decide how he wants to deal with those "small bitter pills" in the U.S. bureaucracy who will not be silenced.

Foreign Aid Cuts

Your readers who are interested in the needs of developing countries will share our concern at British Columbia's diminished assistance in this area. They will recall that during 1977 the provincial government withdrew $5 million from the agricultural aid and world disaster fund set up in 1969. The fund was designed to bear interest to be used in developing rural programs and in providing assistance to disaster areas, especially in the third world countries.

From 1969 to 1975 the total paid out exceeded $2.8 million, an average of about $480,000 per year. In 1977, the government removed the original $5 million from the fund and returned it to general revenue. In its place they budgetted only $350,000 — a decrease of over 25 per cent. This cut, along with the declining value of the dollar, has severely handicapped development projects sponsored by B.C. groups.

This is not a slush fund without safeguards. Grants are made through legitimate organizations with field representatives in the areas where the money is to be spent. Recipient organizations include UNICEF, the Canadian Red Cross, Oxfam, and many other well-known reputable organizations. Furthermore, it is customary for the sponsoring organization to at least match the grant requested from the B.C. fund.

It is our understanding that unless citizens express their concern, the fund may again be held to a maximum of $350,000 in 1978, even though this amount proved inadequate in 1977.

We urge concerned citizens to join us in expressing to the government and to opposition members the need to restore the government contribution to at least the pre-1977 level so that projects carefully supervised by responsible people may not be terminated or postponed due to our lack of concern and effort. — William H. J. Ashwell, Chairman, Victoria Inter-Church Committee for World Development Education, 3400 Connorton Lane.

Psychobabble:The Trendy Newspeak of The 70's

By CHRISTOPHER REED
Manchester Guardian

Hear me. I mean, no way I'm about to lay a bad trip on you. I'm not coming down, like heavy duty, on value judgments. You know the parameters and where it's at. If you've got your head together, you'll know where I'm coming from. You into my space? Wow! I'm really into, you know, I mean how you went with your initial crisis reaction. Aww-right!!

English, in a manner of speaking, in the 1970s. Here are two other examples of this way with words.

"Harvey, I'm gonna tell you something upfront. Even if it means the end of this relationship, like, this is going to be brutal OK? You tell me if I'm wrong here because I'm open to it." But I'm picking up this signal from you, you know what I mean? I mean hostility. Now, hostility's cool, you know. It's OK. But you wanna work through it, because you are what you do. Think about, Harv." — Jerry, in Cyra McFadden's book, The Serial.

My experience is that if I can tell you the truth, just lay it out there, then I have totally opened up a space for you to be who you are and that it really opens up all the room in the world for us to do whatever we want to do in regard to each other. If I don't like you, I'll tell you. And that's great. — John Denver, singer.

For an explanation of my first paragraph, more in a minute. What the other two meant is perhaps best left as vague as it appears. The suspicion that both deeply wanted to bash someone may not be fair. They wanted to tell all, yet they said nothing. They were speaking Psychobabble, the Newspeak of our age — puerile pap, specious speech, yet a dangerously pretentious nonsense talk which one day could engulf us all.

'Mindless Prattle'

Here's a rough translation of my opening paragraph: I don't want to disturb you with grave intellectual opinions. But I'm sure, with your understanding, you will grasp my point of view. Good. I'm delighted you can accept this without any upset. Splendid!

Nobody quite knows when psychobabble began. It was named only recently in a book called Psychobabble, by R. D. Rosen, an author from Boston. The most likely origins were on the opposite side of America and a likely source is Marin. Here lives another opponent of psychobabble, Cyra McFadden, whose succinctly satirical book, The Serial, topped the best-seller lists. She mocked the manners and morals and especially the "mindless prattle" of the psychobabblers, among whom she lives. This article owes much to these two books.

Marin is a county in California facing San Francisco across the Golden Gate Bridge. It stretches across the north bay, enclosing a series of enchanting inlets and curious coves — the latter not all geographical. Sometimes Marin's coast resembles parts of Cornwall, if the Cornish all owned a car, a $130,000-plus house with patio and pool, and a sailing boat, two big dogs, and at least one cat.

It is no coincidence that psychobabble is spoken most monotonously by an affluent middle-class taking selfconscious pride that the luxurious life should never mean vulgarity. The Marinites have taste. They would dearly like to remind us of this, except of course, taste is not mentioned by those who know they have it.

For them, Los Angeles and "that whole southern California bit" is sunbaked territory with half-baked people in white patent leather shoes and matching pastel leisure (pronounced leezher) suits whose conversational preoccupation is money, demonstrated by driving Bentley Continentals while wearing shorts.

In Marin they are "heavily into" modesty. One drives a Volvo while wearing tailored blue overalls, never washed but dry-cleaned in case the Esso sign on the back runs red.

Marin is where many beautiful human beings live, they would like you to know. Ascetic and aesthetes all, they are also heavily into lentil soup and grande cuisine, secondhand clothes and tennis parties, herbal tea and large Tequila Sunrises, getting rid of body toxins and taking cocaine, puffing pot, and a no-smoking zone from Monterey to Cape Cod.

This is where, on a bright Saturday morning, you clip your ten-speed Tour de France Special on the MGB's grid and roar up the hills where, after some brisk pedalling, you roar back and enthuse about the "total physical body experience" and the importance of not "destabilizing the environment."

Marin, divided from San Francisco by the bay, is absolutely not, you understand, a suburb. That is why it is so far out. It provides an "ultra high psychic energy dynamic" but is also very "laid back." It is where you can buy dope on a credit card from a peddler who keeps the stash in a brief-case, but agonizes about whether or not the case should be leather (animal product) or plastic (non bio-degradable.)

Marin is where all the bar interiors are of stone, wood, and hanging plants. "Real neat" (nice) but, as Cyra McFadden points out, it's the new formica.

Apart from gang rape, about the worst sin for a male here is to be fat and to smoke a cigar in a book shop. The Marinite must have been in Gloria Vanderbilt's mind when she said that it is impossible to be too thin or too rich.

Conspicuous consumption in Marin is a very, very cool trip. Cool trippers, those who "go with the flow while experiencing the whole electric Gestalt in the cosmic over-view process" tend to be, as reported, middle-aged (they hate that), middle-class and moneyed: Rejecting the hedonism of the bourgeoisie while directing the inner self to simplicity can be expensive.

One week's abnegation of opulence at the mind farms — as opposed to health farms — which dot California can cost a rich recluse over $1,000. But it is from these merchants of spirituality, the "Human potential movement," that much of the tiresome cant which is psychobabble emanates.

As a language it is not as sinister as the planned creation of Newspeak in 1984. However, as Orwell explained in an appendix, Newspeak was to supercede traditional English only by 2050. Psychobabble may beat his deadline.

Orwell's description of Newspeak remains prophetic: "The purpose of Newspeak was not only to provide a medium of expression for the world-view and mental habits proper to the devotee but to make all other modes of thought impossible." Cyra McFadden has written: "While elsewhere in the country one hears psychobabble spoken by members of the 'counterculture' here, the counterculture has come from under the counter and become the dominant culture itself, its dialect the language of polite society that one must speak in order to belong."

It spreads from a cult to an elite, and perhaps finally to becoming the language of the middle-to-upper classes.

Neither elitist nor cult languages are new. Sir Ernest Gowers, who called it gobbledygook, failed in his various books to persuade the British Civil Service to exchange, say, "accommodation units" for "homes." Claude Cockburn at the old Daily Worker finally gave up on Communist jargon translated from Comintern pronouncements such as "the advanced parts of the working class must make every effort to penetrate the backward parts of the bourgeoisie."

Freudian Phrases

And in the forties and fifties, as Rosen points out, Freudian phraseology became modish among middle-class liberals as a form of intellectual one-upmanship.

As with slang, new styles of speech survive only after a natural birth. As most people do not or cannot speak like bureaucrats, Communist Party theoreticians, or trained Freudians, these have a brief life in the spoken form and continue as a genre only in the written (for which, praise the Lord).

The danger of psychobabble is precisely that nobody deliberately invented it. It is spoken all over California, in bars and on buses, on television and in boardrooms, in drawing-rooms and in vegetarian communes. It is established on the East Coast and is beginning to catch on in southeast England.

Youth, with its babble language disseminated by the international pop music network, is psychobabble's leading export vehicle. But teenage psychobabble is a lost pidgin, confined — at least in the presence of adults — to monosyllabics mixed with ghetto drug slang and four-letter words, such as "far out," "gross," "freaky," and "shit."

In Marin the most verbose psychobabblers are the prosperous parasites — or "service industry professionals" if you like — of the super-rich. Plastic surgeons, landscape architects, dentists, urban planners, sociologists, corporate lawyers, bankers, advertising executives, or child psychologists.

Leonard, the child psychologist in The Serial, was into corporal punishment. He said he'd had amazing results just "acting out" his anger with his patients.

Such Marinites live at a level undreamed of by their British equivalents. They float, in McFadden's phrase, in a "sybaritic miasma." They have reached for and grasped an apparent paradise which many in Britain believe could be theirs if only they could slam the pearly gates on the Inland Revenue. But the Marinite sybarites, in their lavish, post-industrial limbo, are apparently not fulfilled.

Having passed by the struggle which afflicts most of us, the plastic surgeons and landscape architects who have done so much to beautify us and our surroundings, seem to feel they have missed "the fundamental human experience" — a phrase which is one of the foundation stones of psychobabble.

R. D. Rosen quotes the social historian Russell Jacoby: "The more the development of late capitalism renders obsolete, or at least suspect, the real possibilities of self or self-fulfilment, the more they are emphasized as if they could spring to life through an act of will alone."

A Turning Inwards

Rosen comments: "If Jacoby is right, and I think he is, then psychobabble must be seen as the expression not of a victory over dehumanization, but as its latest and very subtle victory over us. What the casual use of psychobabble accomplishes is this: It transforms self-understanding, which each must gain gradually through experience and analysis, into tokens of self-understanding that can be exchanged between people, but without any clear psychological value."

The sterility of the lush life, the paradoxical experience of those who have arrived at it by their late thirties or early forties, appears even emptier by comparison with their early twenties. Many middle-class Americans of the Marinite-type are a product of the heady student days of the early sixties: the clashes at Berkeley and other universities which stimulated campus protests all over the world.

Like Cyra McFadden, who is 40, these Americans prided themselves on resisting the Vietnam war before it became fashionable to do so. They are veterans not of Khe San but of the American Civil Liberties Union. Cyra McFadden herself is a feminist of nearly 20 years' standing.

Yet many, deprived of such obvious targets of rebellion as the war and the worst injustices of racism, and passing the age of 30 — at one time the upper limit for anyone worthy of trust — quickly turned inwards. With America technically at peace in the world, they sought interior peace for themselves. Not that this is discreditable, but concerned so much with themselves and the vanished glorious days, they developed a language.

Rosen says: "The roots of psychobabble are also firmly planted in the language of the human potential movement' . . . its insistence on interpreting an individual's history, and history in general, as the result of conscious choices; in this, psychobabble has fed both on the tendency towards shallow political analysis and sloganeering that was certainly one feature of the sixties counterculture as well as of the human potential movement with its emphasis on ego psychology."

This movement, or industry as I prefer to call it, put down its roots in the rich soil of California and grew faster than crab grass.

Here we have actualism, analytical tracking, Est, Feldenkrais functional integration, Fischer-Hoffman Process, Gurdjieff, Human Life Styling, integral massage, Neo-Riechian bodywork, or-

ORWELL . . . saw it coming

gonomy, polarity balancing, manipulation, postural integration, Primal Therapy and screaming, Scientology, Silva Mind Control, Synanon, Tai Chi, Theta, Yoga (hatha and raja), and Zen. Outside the Top Twenty are oldies but goldies such as orthodox Buddhism or becoming a Born Again Christian. Then there are the Maharaj Ji and the Sun Myung Moon. After that there's not much except Scouting or punk rock.

The benefits are described by a McFadden character: "Est just changed my whole life. I never knew before what a total shit I was." The choice of words shuld not offend the founder of Est, Jack Rosenberg, a former car salesman who changed his name legally to Werner Erhard after reading an article about the creators of post-war West Germany, and who addresses his audiences as "You arseholes."

I have offered some examples of psychobabble and tried to show its origins and history. Now let us take a closer look at the monster itself. This is Rosen's description:

It is a jargon which "seems to free-float in an all-purpose linguistic atmosphere, a set of repetitive verbal formalities that kills off the very spontaneity, candor, and understanding, it pretends to promote. It's an idiom that reduces psychological insight to a collection of standardized observations that provides a frozen lexicon to deal with an infinite variety of problems.

" 'Uptight', for instance, is a word used to describe anything from mild uneasiness to clinical depression. To ask why someone refers to another as being 'hung-up' elicits a reply that reveals neither understanding nor curiosity; 'Well, you know, he's just, well, hung-up'. And interestingly, those few psychiatric terms borrowed by psychobabble are used recklessly. One is no longer fearful; one is paranoid. Increasingly, people describe their moody acquaintances as manic-depressives, and almost anyone you don't like is psychotic or at the very least, schizzed-out."

Psychobabble and its speakers are also maddeningly smug. Trying a rational argument is like trying to chew on candy floss; it disintegrates into a sticky sweetness without offering a trace of nutrition. Opinions are dismissed as "value judgments" as if they were unspeakable oaths.

Feminists Guilty

Psychobabble has intruded on worthy social movements and nowhere more so than Women's Liberation; perhaps because it lacked a traditional language of its own. Cyra McFadden, whose feminist credentials are, as she says, impeccable, is sadly at odds with her psychobabbling-dabbling sisters. They are neatly satirized in the book. There is Debbie Ann Sulzberger who gives demonstrations in gynaecological self-examination and legally changed her name to Woman.

Although psychobabble cannot be blamed for the ludicrous semantics of "herstory" for history, those feminists seduced by its bland pseudo-psychology have made it too obvious a target for mockery. Some feminists' more thoughtful pronouncements have been lost amidst attacks on "the male ego syndrome," "macho power tripping," or "pulling the head-honcho number"— all of which phrases are meaningless.

Psychobabble's intrinsic lack of humor could be its weakest point. We can defeat it. All we need is plain English and good jokes.

Getting Into the Whole Bit

russell baker

The following case histories are excerpted from The Annals of Babble, Montclare Shortside's monumental, immensely moving and poignant, but wise and witty study of human decay. It will soon be published by Skein & Ossa, with illustrations, at $27.50.

Irvin Candora wanted to be into. And why not? All the other members of his crowd had been into four years. Sometimes it seemed to Irvin that everybody in the country was into, except Irvin Candora. In college, his friends had been into Zen, into kidnapping the dean, into marijuana, and plenty more.

Irvin's reluctance to be into anything at all annoyed his acquaintances, who were into being paranoid about anybody who wasn't into the really now talk. They all said Irwin wasn't really now, until somebody observed that if Irvin wasn't into now, he obviously must be into then. This relieved the fears of many and they said, "Man" — for they were all into opening all discourse by saying "Man" — "it's weird being into then, but it's better than not being into anything at all."

Irvin did not feel into then. Sometimes he slipped out of a heavy rain and into a dry martini, out of respect for Robert Benchley. "Hurrah!" his friends would cry. "Irvin is into dry martinis!" But Irvin would point out that he was not into dry martinis, but only into a dry martini. One night after Irvin had slipped into a dry martini he bumped into Robert Benchley, who was eating the olive. "Want a bite?" asked Benchley.

Seeking to impress Benchley, who he admired inordinately, Irvin said, "Thanks. I'm really into olives." Benchley, thinking it would be a waste of time cultivating a man who slipped into a dry martini and thought he was in olives, waded out of the martini, and Irvin never saw him again.

For years Nora K. would lock herself alone in a room every night and try to relate. At work and at play, everybody was relating. They talked of nothing else. Nora listened with shame and loathing, for she had never related. As a little girl, she had never even thought of asking her mother about relating, and if she had thought of it she wouldn't have dared ask, for she knew her mother despised people who spoke nonsense.

One evening some friends who were into punk rock invited Nora to meet a weirdo named Irvin who was always splashing in dry martinis. "This Irvin," thought Nora, "sounds like the dream man who will finally teach me how to relate."

Nora showed up at the appointed hour and slipped into the first dry martini she came to, but the man there was not Irvin. He was Robert Benchley, and he had just eaten the olive. "I'm sorry, but I've just eaten the olive," he said.

"I'm not into olives," said Nora. This was the first intelligent remark Benchley had heard in the last two martinis, and his friendly smile encouraged Nora to become confidential.

"Between us," she confided, "I can't relate."

Benchley grew pale, for under the murmur of the martini's waves it sounded as if she were threatening to relate the entire plot, probably of something eternal, like Bleak House. Having no intention of having even the story of the Iliad, much less Bleak House, related to him, Benchley waded out of the martini. Nora spent the rest of her life in a vain search for him, having recognized him as her only possible soul mate, the only other person in the universe who did not relate.

Absolom Ashcurst was the despair of all society. He didn't know whether he knew who he was or not. What was worse, he didn't care. In the evenings all who knew him would sit around boasting that they really knew who they were or complaining that they could not possibly go on until they discovered who they were.

To all of this Absolom Ashcurst was indifferent. When Carla Braxton would boast that she really knew who she was, Absolom would say, "So what." And when Kevin Toop would groan, "If only I knew who I am!" Absolom would say, "You're Kevin Toop, old sod." And all society would lament that Absolom Ashcurst was not into their heads because he could not relate.

Disgusted by this vacuous chitchat, Absolom skipped into a dry martini one night and saw Robert Benchley diving for the olive. "Take it," said Benchley. "I've already had two." "Who are you?" inquired Absolom who, though accustomed to seeing burglars win his silver chest, was not prepared for a stranger in his martini.

"What's the difference?" asked Benchley. Absolom was enchanted. At last — someone who perceived the immense uninterestingness of knowing whether he really knew who he was or not.

"You and I," he said, "are into ego negation. We really relate!"

Taking a deep breath, Benchley dived to the bottom and refused ever to come out again on grounds that everybody outside was drunk. Absolom Ashcurst later got into jogging, which was easier than getting into white tie and tails, and much more comfortable than getting into his head.

B.C. Forest

British Columbia Forest Products Ltd. reports that its 1977 earnings increased 34 per cent to a record $35.1 million or $4.58 a share, compared with $26.2 million or $3.40 a share the year before.

Sales rose 25 per cent to a record $491.9 million from $392 million.

The company said the favorable United States dollar exchange rate in 1977 accounted for $1.53 of the $4.58-a-share earnings.

The year-end statement included four months' earnings from Blandin Paper Co., of Grand Rapids, Minn., acquired Aug. 31.

The company's return on investment was 8.7 per cent last year, compared with 8.8 per cent in 1976.

Company chairman Ian A. Barclay said in a preliminary year-end report that lumber sales increased significantly and are expected to remain at a satisfactory level this year. He said there might be some volume and price increases in overseas markets and a chance of price weakening in the U.S. toward year-end.

Barclay said pulp was the exception to the company's good performance in 1977. He said high mill inventories and surplus capacity world-wide seriously reduced the company's market pulp sales, prices and earnings throughout the year.

Publication-grade coated paper and aspen waferboard produced by Blandin are projected to remain in good demand through 1978, Barclay said.

Southam

Southam Press Ltd. reports that net earnings for the fourth quarter of 1977 fell by 12 per cent from the corresponding period in 1976, but the company showed a 4.3-per-cent profit increase for the year.

Southam reported 1977 earnings of $25,145,000 or $2.02 a share, up from the previous year's $24,112,000 or $1.88 a share. The 1976 figure included an extraordinary item of $659,000, equal to five cents a share.

Revenues were $313 million, up 6.8 per cent from $293 million the year before.

Fourth-quarter earnings were $7,402,000 or 60 cents a share on revenues of $85.5 million, compared with $8,407,000 or 67 cents a share on $80.8 million revenues in 1976.

The reduction in fourth-quarter income resulted from significant non-recurring expenses rather than a change in the general pace of business, the company said.

Principal factors were relocation costs to Southam Printing's new plant in Montreal and separation pay at the Montreal Gazette. These and other special items were equivalent to approximately seven cents a share, the company said.

Advertising lineage in Southam newspapers was up 3.9 per cent for the year. Circulation in December was three per cent higher than in 1976.

Southam said its commercial printing divisions experienced some slowing in demand, but margins continue to improve.

Montreal Trust

Montreal Trust has announced it recorded a net profit of $5.7 million in 1977, or $2.22 per share, compared with $1.93 per share in 1976.

Revenues were $59,467,000, up $6,495,000 from 1976.

Expenses reached $50,717,000, up $5,819,000 from the previous year. The company said $2,101,000 of the increase was for salaries.

W. T. BROWN

HOW TO CHOOSE A RSP WHEN THEY ALL LOOK THE SAME.

Sure, at first glance all RSP's look the same.

Down the block they may offer flexibility. Around the corner, interest compounded monthly. While across town it's competitive interest rates.

Now, what makes the Permanent's RSP different? Simply this: in our Guaranteed Fund we presently combine all three. Flexibility. Interest compounded monthly. Competitive interest rates. Not only that; there are no initiation or annual administration fees and the maximum close-out fee is only $100.00.

So maybe at first glance all RSP's do look the same, but they're not. Stop in at the Permanent branch nearest you and find out more about the Permanent RSP.

Our branches can also tell you about our Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan (RHOSP).

Heart Disease Drops

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP) — A dramatic decrease over the last two years in deaths from heart disease is likely to continue for another decade, Dr. Michael DeBakey said Monday.

"There is probably no one factor involved in this development, but rather, we are beginning to see the effect of several converging factors," the heart surgeon told the American Society of Contemporary Medicine and Surgery.

He said the decline is the result of several factors—greater public concern about heart disease, improved treatment for hypertension, a greater emphasis on exercise, reduced smoking and advances in heart surgery.

He said continuing progress will result from a better understanding of arteriosclerosis, or hardening of the arteries, and from methods for preventing or curing the disease.

DeBakey also defended coronary bypass surgery as a medical treatment. He said that less than two per cent of his bypass patients died in the hospital and that 92 per cent "are living as long as their counterparts in the general population of the same age and sex."

He added: "In other words, they have been restored to a normal life span."

Beheading Confirmed

LONDON (Reuter) — A Saudi princess and her commoner lover were publicly executed in Jeddah last November because they had committed adultery, the Saudi Arabian government said Tuesday in a statement issued in London.

It was the first official Saudi reaction to British news reports, accompanied by photographs, of the shooting of the princess and the beheading of her lover.

"To clarify the issues: The sentence carried out was passed in an Islamic court as punishment for the adulterous acts committed by the two persons," a statement issued by the Saudi embassy here said.

Husband-Beating Serious Problem, Too

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two authors who helped expose a wife-beating crisis in the U.S. now estimate that nearly one-fifth of America's married women beat their husbands — but few of the humiliated males would dare admit it.

"It boils down to the fact that we have a serious problem in this country with domestic violence — not just wife-beating," said one of the writers, Richard levy. "You've got to view this in terms of humanity, not sex."

Levy and Roger Langley, authors of Wife Beating: The Silent Crisis, said several new sociological studies plus their own research, indicate there are 12 million battered husbands in the U.S. — nearly 20 per cent of the total.

But in recent years wife-beating has been the focus of public attention — thanks to the work of feminist leaders. Many "crisis centres" for battered women have been opened and legislation to protect battered wives has been introduced in the House of Representatives.

"We don't mean to minimize the temendous social problem inherent in wife-beating," Langley said. "However, our continuing study of social violence in American compels us to focus on the other side of the coin, too."

The authors said they were compelled to begin studying husband-beating when they learned of a Washington, D.C., policeman who called a women's crisis centre for advice, claiming his wife beat him every Friday night.

Levy said the problem has been ignored because men are afraid to admit they are the victims of violent women.

"Not many men have the courage to face the snickers, innuendos and open sarcasm of ths sort of situation," he said.

Levy also contended that battered husbands are often hidden in the statistics because, when they fight back, the situation turns inside-out and police list it as a wife-beating incident.

He noted that FBI statistics show that spouse-slayings divide 50-50 between husbands and wives.

He proposed that legislation to help battered wives should be altered to include husbands.

He also said battered men should begin insisting on their rights, particularly in divorce cases.

"In a society that has paid so little attention to wife-beating, it's no surprise that no attention has been paid to husband-beating," he said.

Tobacco Future Enflames Pro-, Anti-Smoking Forces

NEW YORK (AP) — A national commission on smoking called for U.S. government regulation of the tobacco industry Tuesday. The industry replied that it feels too heavily regulated already.

The American Cancer Society, which set up the commission, and spokesmen for the Tobacco Institute, the industry group, held back-to-back news conferences to present their arguments.

The industry has seldom been so aggressive regarding anti-smoking efforts.

The National Commission on Smoking and Public Policy told the cancer society board of directors that the tobacco industry is "virtually unregulated" and "unaccountable to any department or agency of government for the content of its products or the health consequences of their use."

Recommendations for a broad new program to reduce cigarette smoking were based in part, the society said, on testimony received from more than 300 citizens from all 50 states during forums in eight cities last March through June.

Commenting on this, William Kloepfer, senior vice-president of the Tobacco Institute, said the institute taped and filmed the forums in several major cities. He showed brief shots of the forums showing many vacant seats at each stop, intended to suggest to reporters that there was no large public attendance at them.

The commission's report, titled A National Dilemma: Cigarette Smoking or the Health of Americans, was summarized by Dr. Charles LeNaistre, chancellor of the University of Texas System, Austin. He said the new effort is justified because cigarette smoking continues to be the most unnecessary cause of death and disability in the country.

Health Secretary Joseph Califano has said the cost of cigarette-related illness to society was at least $18 billion in 1976. The commission said cigarette smoking was related in 1977 to more than 320,000 deaths.

The commission recommended that the Food and Drug Administration and the Consumer Product Commission should "hold the industry accountable for the safety of its product." It also recommended:

—That the present tobacco price support system be phased out over a 10-year period.

—That a cabinet-level committee on cigarette smoking and the health status of the nation be set up.

—That the FDA study potentially harmful additives being used in many new brands of cigarettes.

20 Years in Space

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A group of United States space science pioneers gathered Tuesday to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the first successful U.S. space mission—the orbit of Explorer I.

The 31-pound satellite was sent into space Jan. 31, 1958, by scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory after a rush order by then-president Dwight Eisenhower, who wanted a successful mission to counterbalance the Soviet Union's success with Sputniks I and II.

They were given 80 days to get the Explorer ready. The satellite made 58,000 orbits.

Most 'Laetrile' Doses Lacking Laetrile: FDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most people taking Laetrile as an alleged cancer treatment may instead be getting its parent compound, which could negate any potency the treatment is supposed to have, a new Food and Drug Administration study says.

In a chemical analysis of Laetrile-related substances, researchers for the FDA and the University of California said most available "Laetrile" actually is amygdalin, a natural compound found in the seeds of certain fruits.

The researchers say the differences between Laetrile and amygdalin are not trivial and that the frequent use of the names interchangeably is erroneous.

The report in the February issue of the journal Analytical Chemistry, published by the American Chemical Society, also said all attempts to make pure Laetrile from natural amygdalin using patented procedures failed. Only by using a new enzyme-regulated synthesis developed by FDA could chemically exact Laetrile be made, the researchers said.

"The failure of the patented procedures as well as the great expense required to achieve the enzymatic synthesis of Laetrile established that this trade-marked compound only exists in extremely limited quantities," said the report.

It concluded that at present, the drug that is offered as an anti-cancer agent is amygdalin.

Dr. Thomas Cairns, the FDA scientist who led the study at the agency's Los Angeles laboratory, said distinguishing the compounds is very important.

Cairns said a body enzyme called beta-glucuronidase believed by Laetrile supporters to initiate the chemical's alleged anti-cancer effect does not act on amygdalin.

Killer Germs Denied

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The Soviet Union issued Tuesday a vehement denial of a Reuters news agency report from Brussels which said Soviet military scientists were developing new strains of killer viruses and microbes.

The report, quoting Western intelligence sources, was described by the Soviet news agency Tass as a "crude and vicious fabrication."

Tass said the dispatch, issued Monday, was so absurd it could well be ignored.

It said such stories could be regarded only as "attempts to justify the military buildup by the Western countries and the plans to manufacture and use the neutron bomb."

"It is well known that the Soviet Union . . . has signed the convention banning the development, manufacture and stockpiling of bacteriological biological and toxin weapons," Tass said.

"It is also well known that the U.S.S.R. always faithfully and precisely observes its international commitments in accordance with their letter and spirit."

Western sources quoted in the Reuters report said U.S. spy satellites had photographed several establishments near Moscow and in the western Soviet Union which intelligence analysts had concluded were biological research and production centres.

The photographs show heavily guarded complexes with equipment necessary to grow biological agents in cultures. Railway lines containing specially designed tanker cars lead to the complexes.

An international convention banning the use, production and possession of biological weapons came into force in 1975 when it was ratified by the Soviet Union, the United States and Britain.

The 30-country Geneva disarmament conference is still trying to negotiate a separate agreement to ban deadly nerve agents and other chemical weapons.

More seriously, Western scientific experts who advise NATO's military authorities have reason to suspect that the Russians are adopting for warfare purposes three new diseases described as hemorrhagic fevers discovered in Africa during the last 20 years. They are lassa fever, which the sources say kills 35 of every 100 people it strikes, ebola fever, which kills 70 of every 100, and the deadly marburg fever, also known as green monkey disease.

The sources said increased Soviet interest in biological warfare, combined with the huge Soviet stockpile of chemical warfare weapons, is disturbing to the United States and its NATO allies.

Thatcher Stirs Up Racist Storm

THATCHER
... 'end immigration'

LONDON (Reuter) — Margaret Thatcher, leader of Britain's opposition Conservative party, was accused of racism Tuesday during a fierce House of Commons argument about colored immigration.

She ran into a storm of protest for having told a television interviewer Monday night: "We must hold out the clear prospect of an end to immigration because at the moment it is between 45,000 and 50,000 people coming in a year."

Enraged Labor government supporters hurled abuse at the Conservative leader Tuesday, taunting her with shouts of "Racist" and "Opportunist" for trying to woo voters by offering them the prospect of an end to Asian, African and West Indian immigration.

Outside Parliament, leaders of the 1.9 million Asians and West Indians living in Britain accused her of damaging race relations, which already are sorely strained in some areas.

Prime Minister James Callaghan demanded that Mrs. Thatcher clarify her position.

Her voice barely audible in the uproar, Mrs. Thatcher responded by requesting detailed goverment immigration statistics. Callaghan replied that there was a 25-per-cent drop in immigration last year.

Earlier, Mrs. Thatcher dismissed the criticism as "absolutely absurd."

In the Commons on Tuesday, Callaghan gave different figures. He said that in 1977 about 28,000 British passport-holders and dependents of British residents came into the country. In addition, 750 entered with work permits.

About 16,200 foreigners living in the country were granted citizenship, he added.

Callaghan appealed to right-wing Conservatives not to whip up the race issue in what is expected to be a general election year.

"I hope she is not trying to appeal to certain elements," he said, his voice almost drowned in the shouting.

The prime minister said the Labor party will continue to allow in a limited number of British passport-holders and dependents of immigrants already in the country.

DAYAN VISIT

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan will make a week-long visit to the United States starting next week, diplomatic sources said Tuesday. Dayan will visit both the east and west coasts of the U.S. but is not expected to visit Washington during his stay, the sources said.

Top Teamsters Sued Over Pension Losses

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. labor department is suing Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons and 15 other former trustees of a scandal-scarred union pension fund to recover millions of dollars in allegedly illegal loans, government sources say.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall called a news conference to announce the suit, due to be filed today in U.S. district court in Chicago.

The ex-trustees of the Teamsters' Chicago-based $1.4-billion central states pension fund allegedly made loans that were improper or illegal under the 1974 federal pension-reform law.

"We really don't know the true extent of the losses and probably will never know, but it involved tens of millions in loans," said one labor department source.

The defendants, in addition to Fitzsimmons, include William Presser of Cleveland and his son, Jackie, 51, who is among those frequently mentioned to succeed the 69-year-old Fitzsimmons as head of the union.

The others include trucking-industry executives and union officials, all of whom had served as pension trustees before resigning in 1976 and 1977 under the pressure of threatened government action against them.

NAVY OFF TO FIJI

The Esquimalt-based destroyers HMCS Restigouche and HMCS Kootenay, along with the supply ship HMCS Provider, are on their way to the South Pacific islands of Fiji, West Samoa and Tonga.

They left Hawaii on Tuesday after a three-day "pit stop" in Pearl Harbor for a maintenance and rest period.

The three vessels will be making courtesy calls in the South Pacific islands, supporting the continuing programs being conducted by the department of external affairs.

The ships will be open to the public, and crews will host children's parties and compete in local sports activities.

Restigouche will visit Apia in Samoa Feb. 8-11, Kootenay will be in the port of Nuka Alofa in Tonga Feb. 10-13, and Provider will drop anchor in Suva Feb. 10-14.

During the latter stages of the Esquimalt-Hawaii leg an international flavor was added when the three Canadian ships were briefly joined by the French frigate Enseigne de Voisseau Henry. The French ship has been in Hawaiian waters several weeks exercising with ships of the U.S. Navy.

A highlight on the way to Hawaii was a combat readiness inspection carried out by Capt. R.D. Okros in which Provider was put through her paces.

Just before the inspection began Restigouche hoisted a large sign which read "You are a tiger tanker — Eat 'em up."

Capt. S.W.Riddell, commander of the Second Canadian Destroyer Squadron, is in charge of the naval contingent until it returns to Esquimalt May 3.

Youth Aid Sought

Armed with pledges of financial support from Saanich and Central Saanich councils, the Peninsula Community Association will ask the provincial cabinet Thursday for a $74,000 grant to finance the continued operation of a youth program in each municipality.

Program supervisor Jean Jones said Tuesday the funding would meet a year's operating expenses, including the salary of a full-time youth worker, for the Cordova Bay Teen Activity Group and a similar organization in Brentwood.

The Saanich group has about 70 members, the Central Saanich group about 60.

Central Saanich council has already approved a $2,918 grant while Saanich council is being urged by its finance committee to approve a $5,388 grant application for the Cordova Bay operation.

In both cases existing financing under the Canada Works program runs out March 31, and requests for assistance from the community grants division of the ministry of human resources have been turned down.

But Jones said she is hopeful that the approach to the cabinet Thursday, when it meets in Saanich, will produce results.

The Peninsula Community Association will also ask the cabinet for $36,000 to meet a year's operating expenses for a mini-bus.

Who Needs Enemies?

Capital Regional District board chairman Jim Campbell says regional directors should get their advice from friends — not enemies.

"If you are elected to carry out a function you should go to the people who share your views and get advice from them," he told a public hearing of the regional district review comittee Tuesday.

"It is just frustrating to go to people you know don't agree with you."

He made the response to committee members who asked about the advisibility of electing advisory committees instead of appointing them.

Duncan Mayor Ken Paskin said Monday advisory planning committees should be elected because appointed members could be friends, cronies and relatives of a director and this would be unhealthy.

"If I am elected to do something I don't think there is any reason to elect more people to tell me what to do," Campbell said.

Outfall Pinpoints Failure

The controversial Clover Point-McMicking sewage outfall is an example of regional government failure, the regional district review committee was told Tuesday.

Regional board chairman Jim Campbell, in particular, was faulted for not reappointing Oak Bay Ald. Shirley Dowell to the regional board public works committee in charge of the $12 million project.

Victoria, Oak Bay and Saanich are financing the project and Victoria Mayor Mike Young said only board members representing a financial commitment should be allowed to vote on it.

"The public works committee is chaired by an electoral area representative (Charles Perkins of Sooke)," he said. "There is no representative from the municipality of Oak Bay although it is paying about 40 per cent of the cost."

Perkins replaces city alderman Murray Glazier, who is an engineer.

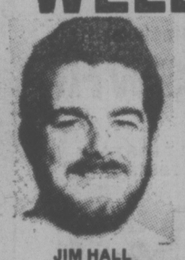

Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith said, "We do not believe that regional directors from Metchosin or the Gulf Islands should be able to vote on any matters involving a sewage disposal scheme paid for solely by three other municipalities."

Margaret Marston, in a brief from concerned residents in the Shoal Bay area, also said regional directors from outer areas should not vote on the issue.

While Oak Bay has no representation on the public works committee, Victoria and Saanich both have two representatives, she said.

Accused Lays Charges

VANCOUVER (CP) — Raymond Rodgers, awaiting trial on sex charges, laid charges Tuesday against Attorney-General Garde Gardom, Abbotsford Mayor George Ferguson and RCMP officers.

The charges were sworn by Rodgers, 42, a planning consultant who was executive assistant to former attorney-general Alex Macdonald.

Rodgers said the charges laid against him by police in the fall of 1976 were based on false information, that justice was obstructed and that he was unfairly ousted from his home, his business office and community.

Rodgers is due to appear in county court Feb. 13 in Chilliwack on charges of having sexual relations with a girl when she was 13 and 14 years of age.

Named in the charge informations for five offences was the RCMP constable who laid the 1976 charges against Rodgers and an RCMP staff sergeant involved in the investigation was named twice.

Rodgers, a PhD and author of a book called Sex and Law in Canada, charges that Gardom, as the province's chief law enforcement authority, was involved along with assorted policemen and prosecutors in obstruction of justice.

The justice of the peace who accepted the charges said he will conduct a hearing at which Rodgers can present evidence

'54-40 or Fight' Battle Cry Revived

VANCOUVER (CP) — United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union members were urged Tuesday to resurrect the slogan "54-40 or fight" as the battle cry in a dispute over northern fishing boundaries.

George Hewison, union secretary-treasurer, told about 100 delegates at the union's annual convention that the United States wants fishing boundaries to be set six or 12 miles south of the international boundary between the Alaskan Panhandle and British Columbia which is located 40 minutes north of the 54th parallel.

The "54-40 or fight" call was heard in 1844 when Oregon residents pressed the U.S. government to extend the state boundary north of the 54th parallel, near present-day Prince Rupert. A compromise was eventually reached with the 49th parallel becoming the boundary between Canada and the U.S.

Hewison said the 54-40 boundary, first recognized in 1825 in a treaty between Russia and England, then in 1903 by the Alaska Boundary Tribunal, is being challenged even though nautical charts have always regarded the area south of it as internal Canadian waters. He said Canada is prepared to give the U.S. a three mile easement along the boundary.

Hewison said Dixon Entrance, a 25 mile-wide channel between the Queen Charlotte Islands and the Alaska panhandle is at the centre of the dispute. The area is an important fishery channel, used by salmon returning to spawn in Canadian waters, he said.

Hewison, a fishing industry adviser, said he fears the U.S. and Canadian governments will turn the negotiating over to a neutral arbitrater, "subjecting our sovereignty to third party management".

He said Canada has proposed that the boundary be set on the basis of lines drawn equidistant between seaward points of land while the U.S. has attempted to seize the best fishing grounds by using either the equidistant or continental shelf to its advantage.

Hewison said lawyers, specializing in international law, argue that the line must be south of 54-40 because "there is no such thing as a country running its sea boundary up to another countries shore."

Other boundary line problems are off the Strait of Juan de Fuca between Vancouver Island and Washington, the Beaufort Sea between the Yukon and Alaska, and southern Nova Scotia.

B.C. fishermen could lose two rich herring and salmon grounds in the Strait of Juan de Fuca if the U.S. proposal for boundaries is accepted there, Hewison said. The U.S. wants the line to be drawn between the most seaward points of land instead of following the continental shelf as it proposed on the east coast.

In a report sent to the federal government in April, 1977, the B.C. government called for more extreme claims stating it would like to see the boundaries follow the continental shelf.

LeBLANC
... misunderstood

Not Backing Down

OTTAWA (CP) — Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc says he is considering changes to a plan to license salt water fishermen in British Columbia but he is not backing down from the proposal.

LeBlanc said in an interview after returning from a tour of the province that he was misunderstood by reporters after a three-hour meeting with B.C. officials led by Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf.

LeBlanc was reported as saying that he would back down from the licence proposal.

There has been provincial objection to the federal proposal to license sport fishermen to help pay the costs of a five-year, $150 millio salmon enhancement program.

The sport fishermen would likely have to pay a $5 to $10 licence in line with freshwater licences. Visitors would be charged a higher rate and this has drawn criticism from the province's tourism industry.

LeBlanc said the federal government is also considering a special tax on commercial fishermen to help defray costs

Port Probe 'Upstage'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government's decision to hold National Energy board inquiry into Canada's oil needs is an attempt to upstage the West Coast oil ports inquiry, the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union said Monday.

Delegates to the union's 33rd annual convention endorsed a report accusing Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie of "panic-mongering" by setting up the investigation of national oil supply and demand during the next 15 years.

The report claimed Gillespie has already decided on the NEB's main conclusion—namely, that oil shipments from Alberta to British Columbia may have to be drastically reduced as domestic supplies decrease, necessitating oil from other sources.

"This is panic-mongering (by Gillespie)," said the report, prepared by Arnie Thomlinson, who was hired by the union to head its opposition to tanker traffic and oil ports along the B.C. coast.

The report expressed union fears that the oil ports inquiry, directed by commissioner Dr. Andrew Thompson, may be upstaged by the NEB investigation, despite Thompson's disclosure Thursday that his inquiry will soon reconvene.

CHICKEN RULING APPEALED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Broiler Marketing Board Tuesday appealed a December B.C. Supreme Court decision that made legal the importation of United States chickens by Super Valu Stores in 1977.

Board spokesman Art Stafford said the board will appeal the case but a date before the B.C. Court of Appeal has not been set.

In December, Justice Hugh Legg said that the board's seizure of 60,000 pounds of imported Missouri chicken meat was illegal.

Walkathon Now Dead

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Miles for Millions walkathon isofficially dead, Ann Prentiss, head of the Miles for Millions organizing group, said Tuesday.

She said the annual walk to raise money for 15 social service organizations outlived its usefulness.

"People were tired of it. It wasn't new, it wasn't exciting and everyone and his dog was walking for something."

Last May's walk drew the smallest turnout in the 10-year history of the event—only 1,450 marchers, compared with turnouts as high as 30,000 in earlier years.

Widow Loses Suit Over One-Way Horse

VANCOUVER (CP) — A horse that wasn't trained to back up led to the death of its rider but British Columbia Supreme Court Justice K.E. Meredith decided Tuesday that Langley horse owner Henry Antonius and an auction firm were not negligent.

Court was told that Peter Daniel Derksen, of Abbotsford, was killed when the three-year-old Pinto mare he was trying out in a Fraser Valley Auction Ltd. pen reared up and fell on him June 21, 1975.

The suit by Derksen's widow was dismissed on grounds of insufficient evidence.

The court was told that Antonius bought the horse from a man who decided to sell it after owning it for only a day and that Antonius kept it for two months before taking it to an auction ring for sale.

While the horse was in a holding pen, Derksen decided to try to mount the horse and walk it around the pen, the court was told.

Antonius told the court that the rider pulled back on the horse's reins when the animal reached a corner of the pen. Antonius said the horse was not trained to back up.

Edward Siemens, counsel for Mrs. Derksen, said Antonius was negligent for not warning Derksen or the auction firm that the horse did not know how to back up. He said the firm was negligent for permitting the public to enter the pen without permission.

Justice Meredith told the court there was no evidence to show that Antonius or the firm management knew the horse would rear suddenly.

"The horse reared for reasons of its own and the fact that it did so on this occasion does not necesarily mean that it had done so on other occasions," said Justice Meredith.

Ex-Dean Chairman

Dr. Ian McTaggart-Cowan of Victoria, former dean of graduate studies at the University of British Columbia, will chair a five-member academic council appointed by the provincial government to oversee and co-ordinate academic, technical and career programs in community colleges and provincial institutes.

Dr. Ralph Patterson, vice-president of corporate services for Canadian Forest Products Ltd., also was appointed to the council.

McTaggart-Cowan was chairman of the Academic Board of Higher Education before the creation of the Universities Council in 1974. Since then he has headed the education ministry's post-secondary co-ordinating committee.

The council will allocate funds to colleges and provincial institutes, monitor admission and transfer arrangements among post-secondary institutions, and maintain academic standards.

Other members of the council are Hugh Harris of Kelowna, former vice-chairman of the Okanagan College council; Jean Turnbull of Trail, a former member of Selkirk College Council in Castlegar, with a master's degree in library science from UBC; Dr. Brian Brown of Dawson Creek, chairman of Northern Lights Community College Council, a United Church minister with a PhD in theology from the University of California.

Castlegar Being Left High, Dry

CASTELGAR (CP) — This community would like to improve its water supply, but both the federal and provincial governments are reluctant to give any aid, Alderman Albert Calderbank said Tuesday.

He said the city wants to tap Canadian Cellulose Co.'s water supply line from Arrow Lake, which would alleviate the water shortage in the community.

The city bored four wells last year in an attempt to expand the water supply but all of them were dry, he said.

MP Bob Brisco (PC-Kootenay West) said in the House of Commons Tuesday that instead of sending $7.9 million to drought-stricken Ethiopia as is planned, the federal government should spend $3 million here to develop a water supply.

Calderbank said federal aid would help, but the community is looking to the provincial government for initial assistance.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis has yet to give the required approval for a money bylaw to help raise $3 million for the initial stage of tapping the CanCel water line.

Calderbank said the city had to impose a three-month building moratorium on construction last year because of strict water regulations.

Hatter Says Paish's Offences 'Not Serious'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. James Hatter, a former provincial fish and wildlife branch director, said Tuesday that he disagreed with an Ashcroft judge who cited outfitter Howard Paish for inexcusable moral turpitude.

Hatter told the provincial inquiry into the issuing of guiding licences that he felt the six charges of contravening provincial fish and wildlife regulations that Paish pleaded guilty to were not serious.

Commission counsel A. G. Henderson asked Hatter if he considered a charge of failing to declare a wolverine on a guide's report serious.

"The judge found it intentional but I still don't know what the circumstances were," Hatter said. "I had a separate duty to perform and had to come to my own conclusions as to the degree of guilt."

Hatter also told the inquiry that he had to relieve chief enforcement officer Charles Estlin of the responsibility of writing letters over his name as a result of a case in which outfitter Richard Blewett's licence was cancelled without a hearing being held.

Safe driving pays for B.C. motorists.

Here's proof:

In most cases premiums are lower in B.C. than in other provinces. Here are some examples for your specific region.

DRIVER: Over 30 years old. No accidents in B.C. in the last 2 years, 3 years elsewhere. Vehicle used to and from work, over 10 miles each way.

AUTOMOBILES	VICTORIA B.C.	EDMONTON ALTA.	OTTAWA ONT.	HULL P.Q.	MONCTON N.B.
1971 BUICK SKYLARK	$162	$325	$311	$365	$318
1974 DART SPECIAL	$173	$373	$355	$427	$369

A study of over 700 comparisons across Canada shows that B.C. motorists pay less for auto insurance in 99.2 per cent of cases. These exclude Saskatchewan and Manitoba, which have subsidized programs and poorer benefits; and even there, B.C. rates are in line and often lower.

B.C. motorists have made a significant contribution to these low premiums. Auto insurance premiums are based on accident claims and the number of accident claims this year is holding at the low level of the previous year.

Overhead down, investment income up.

While the way each of us drives is a key factor in holding the line on insurance rates, there are others, principally, the economical operation of the Insurance Corporation and the success of its investment program.

The overhead expenses of the Insurance Corporation are among the lowest for Canadian insurance companies, in both public and private sectors.

Many of the economies realized are the result of centralized operations, efficient computerizing of information and a single-stop system of reporting accidents, assessing damage and processing claims.

Meanwhile, the Insurance Corporation's investment program, while providing a major source of capital for B.C. business, has yielded impressive earnings: more than $30 million last year, which helped to cover claims and other costs.

Cross-Canada rate comparison

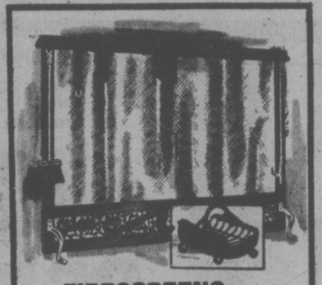

In addition to the comparisons above, the Insurance Corporation analyzed and compared premium rates for 760 individual cases across the country. For a free copy, write: Public Information Department, Insurance Corporation of British Columbia, 1055 West Georgia Street, Vancouver, B.C. V6E 3R4.

Hotel Clerk Testifies Of Threats

The night desk clerk at the James Bay Inn, 270 Government, told Victoria county court Tuesday two masked men robbed the premises of $114.70 at about 4:30 a.m. Sept. 1 after he opened a locked door in response to a knock.

Walter Scott was testifying in the second day of the armed robbery trial of Edward King Krobel, 30.

The case is being heard by a jury and Judge J.J. Anderson.

He said he could see through a window a man with a toque partially on but could not recognize the face. He opened the door and the man kept it open by putting his foot in. Behind him was another man with a toque.

The first man said "this is a holdup" and produced a knife and said he wanted money. He told the second person to clean out the cash drawer.

Scott said he was ordered to lie on the floor and a chair was put on him and he was told to "stay there or they would kill me."

He said the toques were black or dark blue and said two toques produced in court looked like the ones he saw that night.

Asked who told him he would be killed, he said "I figured" it was the taller of the two persons — the one who had earlier told the other to clean out the cash drawer.

Jimmy Morrison, a tenant at an apartment at 128 Croft in James Bay, said Roger Lindal and a woman identified to him as Jean arrived in the late evening of Aug. 31 or the early morning of Sept. 1.

Some time later, three more people arrived. He said they included a woman introduced to him as Kathy, Ed Krobel and Trevor Hughes. Later, he said he knew Krobel as Ed and heard the name Krobel later. Asked if Krobel was there, he said it was either him or someone "extremely similar" to him.

He said a knife shown to him, which another witness said was found on a dining room table, was his or similar to his.

After the three arrived, he said there was conversation, and food and drink were consumed, and later Lindal, Krobel, Hughes and Kathy left. Some time later the four returned.

In cross-examination, he said "absolutely" when asked if he had ever before mistaken the identity of anyone.

He said he had been pub-crawling during the day but didn't know which ones, how much he drank, when he started drinking and when he left pubs.

Cab driver Edwin Brooks said he took two men and a woman from downtown to 128 Croft about 3:30 a.m. He identified Krobel as one of them.

Det.-Sgt. Peter Voth of the city police said he went to Morrison's apartment at 7:10 a.m. Morrison answered the door and inside he found Krobel, Kathy Wells and Trevor Hughes asleep. On the dining room table he found a knife with a seven-inch blade.

A 17-year-old Crown witness told the court Monday she had lied before while under oath.

But she testified she was telling the truth to a jury hearing the charge of armed robbery against Krobel.

Kathy Wells, a permanent ward of the court who had been held in custody as a material witness until conclusion of her testimony, gave evidence in the first day of Krobel's trial.

She agreed when cross-examined by Krobel's lawyer, Douglas Christie, that she had given two written statements to police Sept. 1, the first under an alias.

And she agreed she told a preliminary hearing the first statement was true and the second untrue.

Christie also questioned her about events leading to Krobel striking her last week.

She said she had visited him in Wilkinson Road jail and apologized for lying and continued to visit him and even disguised her identity to do so.

She agreed she went to see him in his room in the New England Hotel last week because she hadn't gone to court for his trial when she should have. She agreed he was drunk.

Christie suggested Krobel told her "you bitch, it was because of you that I was kept in for six months.

She said Krobel "smashed me in the nose first and then under the chin and I don't know how I got the black eye. I was angry at him. He's better off locked up so he won't do that to someone else. If he's going to pull a knife at the James Bay Inn and hit me, what's he going to do to someone else?"

The trial continues today.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

An 18-year-old student was fined $100 in provincial court Tuesday for assaulting a service station attendant after a disagreement over trading empty beer bottles for gas.

Charles David Warnock, 2842 Lakehurst, was a passenger in a vehicle which was at the station at 849 Goldstream on the evening of Nov. 12, Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told the court.

When the attendant arrived, the driver asked if he could exchange beer bottles for gasoline and the attendant said no, Mulligan stated. The attendant then went to serve another customer and when he returned, the vehicle had been gassed up.

Mulligan said an argument and scuffle broke out. Warnock came around from his side of the car and said to the attendant, "Don't give me any of that crap," and hit the attendant in the face and stomach.

Warnock told RCMP officers who arrested him later the service station previously took beer bottles in exchange for gas.

A 29-year-old Richmond man elected trial by judge without jury on two counts of theft over $200 and one count of fraud.

Luis Guzman Acosta, a former accounts manager at a branch of the Royal Trust, is charged with theft of $3,500 and $9,435.54, and defrauding the trust company of the total amount of $12,935.54 between April 1 and May 31 of last year.

Acosta first appeared in court Friday and was released on his own recognizance in the sum of $2,500 with one or two sureties.

A preliminary hearing on all charges was set for May 2.

In a new information sworn against Grant, 114 Ontario, he was charged with three counts of mischief causing wilful damage on Jan. 12 and 14, and one count each of wilfully setting fire to a car and arson in connection with Nootka Court, 600-block Courtney, on Jan. 23.

On application of his lawyer, Grant was remanded to today in custody for bail hearing and remanded until next Tuesdaly for election of his trial method.

Robert Reid Goodwin, 21, of 76 Dallas, was charged with breaking and entering and possession of stolen property and remanded until next Tuesday for election.

Bell changed his plea to guilty on a charge of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 Oct. 15 on the West Coast Road in Sooke.

Mulligan told the court Bell had a conviction on July 16, 1973, in Chemainus for dangerous driving and was fined $100 and is serving three months definite and three months indefinite imposed Jan. 26.

Green said the seven days will be served consecutively to Bell's current sentence and also placed him on six months probation.

Fined for driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 was Lori Kathleen Baker, 21, of 1024 Pakington. In addition to a $250 fine, Green also ordered the woman to perform 40 hours of community service work.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Victor Kenneth Underwood, 33, of 2795 Beach, $700; Robert Craig Elphick, 22, of 420 Catherine, $500; and Paul Hewison, 24, of 425 Simcoe, $400. In addition, Hewison was given a one-day jail sentence and placed on three months probation after pleading guilty to mischief causing wilful damage. He was ordered to pay $60.90 restitution to the city of Victoria for kicking and damaging a door of a police vehicle.

Assault Nets Year's Jail

William Edward Elshaw, 40, of Victoria was sentenced to one year in jail Tuesday by county court Judge Montague Drake.

He pleaded guilty Jan. 5 to indecent assault on a woman July 2 in the city.

Chilliwack Loses Land Appeal

The provincial cabinet has rejected a request by the Township of Chilliwack for exclusion of 382 acres in Fraser-Cheam Regional District from the Agricultural Land Reserve, an environment ministry spokesman said Tuesday.

The spokesman said the township hoped to use the land for residential and industrial purposes "with emphasis on industrial."

He said the appeal was made to the cabinet's environment and land-use committee which recommended rejection.

The application was not supported by the regional district, and was opposed by the provincial land commission, he said.

CALF HAS 3 MOUTHS

Lawyer Banned From Pen

foiled and developed into the current stand-off.

"We know the escape attempt was the collective action of five hostage-takers and, as well, some of the so-called civilian hostages."

Northorp said the meeting Tuesday night was held in an entrance well between two sets of barred doors at the prison's outer gates, out of sight from the other hostage-takers and from police deployed within the prison.

Northorp said the shift from the previous open meeting area was necessary because some statements "indicated some jeopardy and for that reason it was necessary to ensure to these people that safety would be guaranteed in the well area because it would not be in open view and they would go behind bars."

Northorp did not say which side made the statement which brought about the change, but did say that he has negotiated at gunpoint with the prisoners.

Northorp said he hadn't seen the handgun, but was told by other negotiators that one of the convicts aimed it at him during one negotiating session.

All five prisoners have expressed interest in transferring from the B.C. penitentiary and negotiations bogged down earlier in the day around the transfer of three.

Northorp said a two-stage transfer to Millhaven prison near Kingston, Ont., had been approved by the Canadian penitentiary service.

Three prisoners were to be transferred to an RCMP lockup, he said, accompanied by the release of three hostages. The three prisoners would then call the other two who were to surrender and release the remaining hostages.

If the remaining two failed to surrender within 24 hours, he said, the first three would be sent back to the supermaximum section at the B.C. penitentiary.

Ms. Jackson said the prisoners balked at the plan.

"They are prepared to be held in the lockup until a transfer is possible, but they are not prepared to return to the penitentiary after 24 hours," she said.

Holmes said he believed the prisoners were still "all together" despite differences in their demands.

An RCMP spokesman said food was being given to the prisoners and hostages as a matter of course, but he could not comment on whether the prisoners had received any more Demerol. The prisoners requested and received two doses of the habit-forming, relaxant Sunday and one dose Monday.

He said the hostages were believed to be in good condition. Lauri England was the only one of three hostages released to have been identified by RCMP.

An unidentified relative of one of the hostage-takers told a local radio station Saturday the hostages were: England, prisoners Dennis Hailes and Robert Desjarlais, Laurie Hailes, Betsy Wood, Sandra Midley, Gay Hoon, Mary Wildgrube, Patti Araki, Heather Bauer, Joy Atkinson, Dennis Lavallee and Katharine Saumer, wife of Ralph Saumer.

Ms. Wood and Ms. Hoon were identified as prisoners' rights activists and Ms. Hoon was said to be pregnant. Ms. Midley is Wood's daughter. It was not known if Laurie Hailes is a relative of prisoner Dennis Hailes.

Guard Roy Yasuda, 32, who was stabbed in the neck during the attempted escape, was reported to be in stable condition Tuesday.

high freight rates for steel shipments from Northern Ontario to the west.

Compounding current fears is a plan by the Canadian National Railways, CP Rail and Algoma Central Railways to increase steel freight rates from Ontario by five-per-cent April 1.

In Victoria, Premier Bill Bennett was told Tuesday Eastern Canadian steel fabricators are outbidding B.C. firms firms for construction work because thesurcharge.

In a brief to the premier, the Burnaby local of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers says the surcharge is creating unemployment in B.C.

"The Alberta market for structural steel, a traditional customer for B.C. fabricators, has now been effectively closed as Toronto-based fabricators are currently outbidding B.C. companies," the brief says.

The union also says reinforced concrete firms are outbidding steel fabricators because of the surcharge.

Bennett said that his government, which is appealing the ruling to the federal cabinet, will continue to pressure Ottawa to overturn the ruling by the federal anti-dumping tribunal which resulted in the surcharge.

After meeting with Bennett, union treasurer Frank Nolan said his group is happy with the government position.

"We've had a chance to explain first hand our unemployment problems."

My Good Buddies on the Malahat are in trouble again.

Those guys who spend much of their summer up there helping out and making sure that you, the motorist, enjoy yours, are broadcasting another S O S — this time, for themselves.

I'm talking about the Malahat Safety Patrol, a community service that has been performed by members of the Juan de Fuca Citizens Band (CB) Radio Club for the last seven years. You may recall that last spring I wrote a little piece on the club and its fear that, because of rising costs, the patrol might die after the summer.

Well, it hasn't died yet and, in fact, the club has a new man at the helm — someone who is not only a new member but the new president — who is already shouting that the patrol will keep going "come hell or high water."

That's the sort of attitude the Juan de Fuca CBers need right now but even Rae Martin, who has taken over the reins from Roy Batstone, admits the club must have more members. A whole lot more.

The club patrols the Malahat between Goldstream and Bamberton continuously each Friday evening and again Sunday afternoon and evening on summer weekends, looking for and reporting trouble on the accident-plagued stretch of highway.

Its members stop and give what assistance they can to stranded motorists, B.C. resident and tourist alike. And in the event of an accident, the CBers render first aid and take charge of traffic control until the police arrive. It's a fine community service and one for which the Colwood RCMP has nothing but praise.

But it's all done on a strictly volunteer basis which means, of course, those countless trips back and forth over the Malahat come out of the club's meagre coffers or the members' pockets. They were sure last summer's Malahat Patrol would be the last.

At the club's annual meeting, few people were around.

"Three guys handed in their resignations right there," says Martin. "There were barely enough to form a quorum; and they asked me if I'd run for president, so I said sure."

Though he'll be 65 in July, the livewire manager of a Victoria highrise apartment building is providing the club with a much-needed burst of enthusiasm. He talked those three would-be dropouts into staying on, ringed his wife Pauline in as treasurer, and has since built the member ship up from 11 to 18.

But that, he knows, is far from the number needed to keep the patrol running.

"We could do with anywhere from 50 to 100 members," says Rae, who points out the club once had 100 members in its early days.

"We're having a display and membership drive in the Hillside Mall on March 9, 10 and 11," he adds.

In a world where most people seem to think of themselves rather than of others, the unselfish attitude of those in this club is refreshing and, I feel, deserves support. So, if you're a CB nut and just might have some time on your hands on the occasional weekend this summer, why not get in there? You could do a lot worse with your time.

As far as Martin is concerned, the club has nowhere to go but up. He's had new larger signs made for the cars, plans to extend the runs to include Saturdays and says whether it's his turn or not, he'll be up there "making sure the boys are doing a good job."

"We're working closely with the Colwood RCMP and are going to make an even better job," he says. "Most of the members who will be on the 'Hat will be taking a safe-driving course. We're going to have first class members up there — not a bunch of CB kids horsing around."

And ask Rae Martin if there is still a chance the patrol will be scrapped and he gives a wide smile.

"No way! It will keep going . . . even if my wife and I have to make all the runs alone."

C. Saanich Targeted By Unions

The Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council is zeroing in on Central Saanich in its running battle against construction being done by non-union workers.

About 16 construction union workers demonstrated Tuesday outside Central Saanich's municipal hall to protest the use of non-union sub-contractors on a police station-firehall addition.

The council's position is that the municipality should not hire non-union people at less than union rates when 40 per cent of Vancouver Island's contruction workers are unemployed.

Ted Bowers, executive director of Olco Management Ltd., the company handling the Central Saanich project, said the municipality's position in putting the project out to tender was that it should be open to union and non-union contractors.

"The reasoning was that there are both union and non-union taxpayers," Bowers said.

He said it is his understanding that Wergeland Construction, the firm doing the initial structural work, is now employing three men and paying them union wages.

He said Wergeland told him that the key people working on the project would be union.

John Schibli, secretary of the trades council, said meetings were held with Wergeland before the contract was awarded asking if the company would be willing to agree to collective agreements with the workers on the site.

He said the contractor said he couldn't afford such agreements on this particular job leading Schibli to believe that union wages and benefits are not being paid.

Schibli said in good times companies like Wergeland don't bid on projects like the $375,000 Central Saanich job and the work goes to established firms. But now that times are tough, contractors are getting work where they can.

Ted Kurvers, spokesman for Wergeland, said there are three workers on the site now, one of them union and two non-union. All three get union wages. However, he said, they don't get all union benefits such as dental plans.

He said Wergeland hires union or non-union workers depending on the stipulations in the specific project.

Kurvers said it costs about $1.50 an hour less to employ a non-union worker and therefore when his company bids on a non-union project the price is about 10 per cent lower than if all union employees were used.

Walkway

A 300-foot pedestrian walkway will be built over the Trans-Canada Highway at Portage Road as part of the highway widening project.

Tenders to erect the overpass 3.2 miles west of Douglas Street will be called Feb. 21, Esquimalt Socred MLA Lyle Kahl said Tuesday.

City Joins Campaign To Delay New Hospital

Construction on the proposed new Helmcken Road hospital will be delayed two months and the regional hospital and health planning commission stripped of its decision-making authority if city council's planning committee gets its way.

In a strongly-worded motion by Mayor Mike Young at a meeting Tuesday, the committee agreed to recommend to city council that a start on the Helmcken project be set back to April.

The planning committee's recommendations likely will be endorsed by council at the next full meeting, a week Thursday, and Victoria will become the fourth municipality to support a delay in the Helmcken project.

At the urging of the Victoria Medical Society, Esquimalt, Saanich and Oak Bay councils have already agreed to ask the provincial government for a delay.

The city committee's decision came after it heard a presentation by VMS president Dr. J.D. Critchley whose association is strongly opposed to the Helmcken proposal.

The planning committee will also tell council the hospital care needs of the western community — which is to be served by the proposed new hospital — should be reassessed, and that in the future the hospital and health planning commission should not have the power to make decisions on the matter.

Committee chairman Ald. Bob Wright and Mayor Young attacked the hospital and health planning commission for what Wright termed "empire-building in the worst way."

Wright said that only four of the hospital commission's 14 members are politicians and he found it totally unacceptable that a non-political board is making decisions on matters of extreme importance to the community.

Only Ald. Larry Ryan spoke against Mayor Young's motion, saying that "I have more confidence in the (hospital and health) planning commission that in some politicians. I think the politicians have confused this issue immensely."

Although Critchley has won the support of Victoria's planning committee, he didn't do it without butting heads with one of the members.

Wright suggested that a small hospital of perhaps 169 beds would be advisable to meet health care needs in the growing region.

Critchley said the VMS would have strong objections to that proposal because small hospitals don't provide the best care, and it would be better to bring patients an extra few miles for treatment at either Victoria General or Royal Jubilee.

"I think you're trying to offer them something as a political expedient to keep them happy," said Critchley.

After a somewhat heated exchange over that point Wright calmed matters by saying that "I think that we're on the same side of the fence although we appear to be on opposite sides sometimes . . . let's fight for what we believe in."

75 Jobs Change Hands As School Staff Laid Off

The Greater Victoria School District laid off 39 employees Tuesday as part of its plan to scrap jobs the district says are redundant because of declining enrolment.

The school board announced last September its intention to chop 57 positions by the middle of 1978 and the move was opposed vigorously by the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

6% Hike

Greater Victoria substitute teachers will only get a wage increase of six per cent — the Anti-Inflation Board limit, trustees said at a budget meeting this week.

The subs will not receive the 32 per cent increase awarded by an arbitration panel in December.

CUPE Local 382, representing outside workers, and Local 947, representing inside workers, eventually reached an agreement that the board would have to follow union-wide seniority procedures in laying off the employees.

In Local 382, as a result of the "bumping" effect of a senior worker taking the job of an employee with less seniority, 31 people were laid off and 75 jobs changed hands.

In Local 947, 11 positions were eliminated but only eight people laid off as the board decided to keep two of the jobs and one employee found another job.

Tom Cooper, president of Local 382, said a lot of people took "healthy cuts in pay" as a result of the shuffling.

He said once the seniority issue was resolved, the layoffs went fairly smoothly but there will be several grievances submitted. They will be arbitrated by a Labor Relations Board panel.

Five apprentices who were laid off were possibly the hardest hit by the move, Cooper said, as most of them have only one year left in their four-year apprenticeship. If they can't find another employer soon they may have to repeat one year, he added.

CUPE has asked the school board to rehire the apprentices.

Snow Tonight For Peninsula

Snow fell Tuesday night on Saanich Peninsula and there will be a repeat tonight as temperatures hover around zero.

Most of Greater Victoria had rain which continued today but the weather office reported two centimetres of snow at the airport overnight, and about 3 cm. on higher ground in Central and North Saanich where some residents said there was as much as two inches.

Intermittent light rain mixed with snow is forecast for Thursday with lows in the range of —2 to 0 and highs between 2 and 4 degrees.

Flower Count Central All Ready

A running total of flowers blooming outdoors in the Victoria area will be registered daily in Eaton's window.

Phone numbers for the count are 382-7501, 386-2441 or 384-9314 during business hours.

The count is being registered at the three local radio stations because phones could not be installed at Flower Count Central, due to the B.C. Tel labor dispute.

Victoria's flower totals will also be posted daily in Calgary and Edmonton and 30 Victorians will leave on a daffodil blitz of the two centres starting Monday.

The group will stop in Kelowna for a brief promotion effort before continuing to Calgary, arriving in Edmonton Wednesday.

Flowermometers will be erected in both cities as part of a campaign to encourage winter travel to Victoria.

Signals Out For Two Days

Traffic lights at Blanshard and Fairfield will be out Thursday and Friday while a control device and pole are replaced.

And only one lane inbound will be open on Douglas at Queens, a spokesman for the Victoria traffic departament said today. The one-lane situation should last about three weeks while city crews do sewer work.

'Key Question is Response Time'

Saanich is not convinced that a provincial takeover of the municipal ambulance service would be in the best interests of residents, Mayor Mel Couvelier said today.

Couvelier said he will tell the provincial cabinet when it meets at Saanich municipal hall Thursday.

He considers the subject important enough for it to occupy the entire time allotted to Saanich for presentation of a brief.

Couvelier said that discussions have been held in the last month between municipal officials and representatives of the provincial emergency health services commission, on the implications of the municipal ambulance service being discontinued.

On the basis of the information provided, he said, Saanich believes "the service they (the commission) are offering would be inadequate and unacceptable."

"The key question is response time," he added.

"If the provincial service is not going to improve the response time for Saanich residents, as chief executive officer for the municipality I cannot accept that.

"If they are talking about a decline in response time that is a serious matter the municipality is not prepared to accept."

Meanwhile, Couvelier said Saanich Fire Chief Harold Gains cannot confirm or deny charges by the Ambulance Employees Union that there was an unduly slow ambulance response to two emergency situations in Saanich.

The union said this week, in a brief to Health Minister Bob McClelland, that a heart attack victim living above a provincial ambulance station could not be helped by provincial personnel downstairs because they had to wait until an ambulance was sent from the Saanich fire department, almost 2 km away.

In another situation, the AEU said, there was an "unjustifiable time delay" when a motor-vehicle accident occurred two blocks from the same provincial station yet the Saanich ambulance was asked to respond.

Couvelier said the specific situations are difficult to investigate because the fire chief has no dates to go on.

But Gains has commented that previous allegations of confusion in responding to calls have been shown to be "unfounded," Couvelier said.

The AEU's brief cited the Saanich examples in claiming that jurisdictional disputes have led to situations where nearby provincial facilities were bypassed in favor of municipal ambulance services.

The union called for all ambulance services to be placed under the jurisdiction of the provincial ambulance agency.

CANADIENS DRAW RECORD CROWD AT DENVER

Blight Leads Canucks

By Canadian Press

Rick Blight scored twice in a three-goal Vancouver outburst in the second period to lead the Canucks to a 4-2 decision over Washington Capitals in a dull National League game at Vancouver's Pacific Coliseum Tuesday night.

Blight's second goal on a power play late in the period broke a 2-2 tie and gave the third-year pro four goals in the last two games.

Hilliard Graves and Pit Martin also scored for the Canucks as they moved to within 10 points of first-place Chicago Black Hawks in the Smythe Division.

In other NHL games Tuesday night, Atlanta Flames beat Minnesota North Stars 7-4, Pittsburgh Penguins defeated Detroit Red Wings 5-3, and Montreal Canadiens downed Colorado Rockies 5-3.

The Rockies were anything but dejected by their loss and Montreal's 18th game without defeat.

A good part of the home club's satisfaction came from seeing the biggest crowd ever at Denver—15,404—turn out for the game. And Rockies coach Pat Kelly found a few bright spots in his team's play to further offset the loss.

"I think the people saw a pretty good hockey game," said Kelly. "I don't think anybody went home unhappy."

Highlighting the action were three goals by Montreal centre Jacques Lemaire, all on passes from winger Guy Lafleur.

Montreal coach Scotty Bowman said his club finds it difficult playing at Denver's mile-high altitude. "I think it makes a difference. But Colorado played a good game, especially in the second period. If they could have got a goal you can never tell what would have happened.

Montreal's 18-game unbeaten streak includes 16 wins and two ties. Their last loss was Dec. 17 against Pittsburgh. The league record unbeaten string is 23 games, first set in 1940 by Boston Bruins who earlier this season had a 17-game undefeated string.

Left winger Eric Vail scored two goals and defenceman Ed Kea had three assist to lead the Flames over Minnesota at Atlanta.

At Detroit, Jean Pronovost had two goals for Pittsburgh. His first came on a first-period power play and 54 seconds later, Blair Chapman got another power-play score to give the Penguins a two-goal lead. A penalty to Detroit's Dan Maloney and a bench penalty when Maloney was tardy in going to the box resulted in a two-man advantage for the Penguins.

The Red Wings tried to get back in the game, outshooting the visitors 51-20, but goalie Don Herron was sharp in the Pittsburgh nets.

In Vancouver, the opening period saw the Canucks blanked on three power plays by the tight-checking Capitals, which had the better scoring chances.

Smith got his fourth goal of the season at 7:07 after Bill Collins won a faceoff in the Vancouver end from Chris Oddleifson of the Canucks.

Vancouver capitalized on its few good opportunities around the Washington net in the second period to take a 3-2 lead.

Graves put Vancouver ahead 2-1 at 13:37 with his 10th goal when he picked the top corner after a fine lead pass by defenceman John Grisdale.

Bolonchuk tied the score on a long shot from the point at 18:33 but the Canucks regained the lead 55 seconds later on Blight's 15th goal of the season from just outside the Washington crease.

12 Years In Training, Kim Not 'Out' Yet

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

The "out" list seems to have drawn more attention than the "in" list in the 1978 Canadian Figure Skating championships that opened here today.

And Ottawa's Kim Alletson, once thought a casualty, insisted Tuesday that she still remains on the "in" list.

The 19-year-old from the Minto Club, one of the pre-competition choices in the senior women's singles, was rather miffed with those who had here on the "out" list earlier in the day.

The knee injury is for real, as evidenced by the crutches that helped Kim manoeuvre around the lobby of the Empress Hotel. But withdrawal, Kim said firmly, hasn't happened.

"I'm still hoping," she said. "It makes no sense. What's a few seconds when I've worked 12 years to get here? As long as there is a chance for recovery, I'm still in.

"And if I can cut an outside edge, I'll skate."

The injury has been diagnosed as a torn cartilage in her right knee.

"I hurt my knee once before and the doctors said I'd never skate again. A physiotherapist got me back on skates and he's working on it again."

Dennis Coi of Coquitlam, one of the 10 rivals who will challenge Ottawa's Gary Patterson for the junior men's singles title, suffered a cut foot when the blade of one skate ripped through the boot of the other. The injury, however, is not believed serious enough to sideline the B.C. skater.

Alletson's injury has marked Heather Kemkaran as the leading candidate to succeed Ottawa's Lynn Nightingale as the national champion. She beat out Kim for second place last year and placed 12th in the world championships at Tokyo.

PAIN IS EVIDENT as New Orleans star Pete Maravich is wheeled off floor after injuring knee in fourth quarter of National Basketball Association game Tuesday in Superdome. Maravich, the league's leading scorer, had fired 26 points before suffering injury that may keep him out of next Sunday's all-star game. He also collected 15 assists to help Jazz chalk up 114-95 victory over Buffalo Braves. It was ninth straight win for New Orleans. (AP wirephoto)

Cougars Bolster Unbeaten Skein

Victoria Cougars, playing without top goalgetter Geordie Robertson for the third straight game, still managed to boost their unbeaten streak in the Western Canada Hockey League to five games Tuesday.

Cats posted a 7-4 victory over host Saskatoon Blades before 1,777 fans in the Prairie city.

The win moved Victoria into a third-place tie with New Westminster Bruins in the Western Division of the WCHL, trailing second-place Seattle Breakers by two points.

Saskatoon had its winless streak extended to 13 games.

Gary Lupul and Curt Fraser each scored two goals to pace the Cougars, while singles went to George Fritz, Bill Jobson and Dennis Fenske.

Jobson was back in the lineup after missing the last two games of the Prairie road trip with a separated shoulder.

Cougars, who have won three of the four road games, continue the jaunt tonight in Lethbridge.

Bill MacNaught scored two goals for Saskatoon and Ken Federko and Randy Kearney replied with singles.

Victoria led 2-0 after the first period and Saskatoon battled back to tie the score 4-4 by the end of the second.

Meanwhile, in other games, Brandon Wheat Kings missed a chance to move into first place in the Eastern Division with a 7-5 loss at home to Seattle Breakers and Medicine Hat Tigers improved their position in the standings with a 5-2 victory over visiting Calgary Wranglers.

DICK VERTLIEB GUEST SPEAKER

With a solid background in two professional sports, Dick Vertlieb has joined several other notables as a guest speaker for the 11th annual Greater Victoria Sports Celebrity Dinner on March 13 at the Empress Hotel.

Vertlieb, executive director and general manager of Seattle Mariners, joined the American League baseball franchise in 1976.

Previously, the 47-year-old native of Los Angeles was involved with two National Basketball Association teams — the Seattle SuperSonics from 1967-69 and Golden State Warriors from 1973-75.

Vertlieb joins B.C. Lions' quarterback Jerry Tagge, professional wrestler Gene Kiniski and several other yet-to-be-announced guests at the dinner which annually honors Victoria's outstanding athletes and officials.

CANADA MAY SKIP WORLD TOURNEY

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada might not send a hockey team to Prague in April for the world championship, Hockey Canada chairman Douglas Fisher said Tuesday.

"If we can't send quality players, for what reason should we be there?" Fisher asked in an interview.

Fisher confirmed he advised Guenther Zabetski, president of the International Ice Hockey Federation (IIHF), last week Canada might not participate.

The IIHF could demote Canada to the B pool, but Fisher said "it's my point that if we don't send a team of quality, it doesn't matter if we go in April or are demoted."

Under IIHF rules, the last place team in the A pool, which has the world's top teams, is demoted to the B pool for the next championship.

"I felt I should warn Zabetski how Hockey Canada might have difficulty getting players of quality," Fisher said.

Fisher said he did so after receiving a joint letter from Phil Esposito of New York Rangers and Bobby Clarke of Philadelphia Flyers of the National Hockey League. Both executives of the NHL's Players' Association expressed concern over the calibre of players available at this time of the year.

ALEX HAS HIS TURN

Alex Gower, many times a spectator to the accurate swatting of Mike Turyk, who has compiled a remarkable record for holes-in-one, has finally experienced the pleasure of shotmaking perfection.

Gower had his turn in the spotlight Sunday when he cranked his tee shot into the cup on the 215-yard seventh at Victoria Golf Club for his first-ever hole-in-one.

Watching it all was Turyk, the man who has 23 aces to his credit, including a world-record tally of nine on the same hole — that difficult seventh on the Oak Bay links.

Knicks Knocked By Jumping-Jack

By Canadian Press

"David is playing the best basketball he's ever played," Brown raved Tuesday night—and with good reason.

Thompson hit 14 of 22 shots from the field and 13 of 14 from the free-throw line for 41 points, leading the Nuggets to a 119-115 National Basketball Association victory over New York Knicks.

He also had seven assists and five rebounds.

"I had a hot night," said the six-foot-3½ jumping jack who will be starting for the West in Sunday's all-star game. "Everything was going in, especially in the first half. Any time I get hot like that, it's hard for anybody to stop me."

In other games, New Orleans Jazz dumped Buffalo Braves 114-95, Portland Trail Blazers whipped Milwaukee Bucks 136-116, Boston Celtics beat Indiana Pacers 104-94, Los Angeles Lakers defeated Cleveland Cavaliers 116-107, San Antonio Spurs whipped Washington Bullets 129-109, Chicago Bulls tripped Atlanta Hawks 106-103, Phoenix Suns outlasted Kansas City Kings 112-102 and Golden State Warriors got past New Jersey Nets 103-92.

The Knicks tried an assortment of men on Thompson in the first half, all to no avail. He hit his first six shots from the floor and had 23 points by halftime as the Nuggets led 59-53.

The score was tied five times and the lead changed hands twice before Issel put the Nuggets ahead to stay with a bank shot that made it 111-109 with 2:16 to play. Two free throws apiece by Thompson, Issel and Mack Calvin in the final 1½ minutes clinched it.

Issel added 27 points and Bobby Wilkerson had 10 assists for Denver, while Bob McAdoo topped the Knicks with 33 points. Williams had 10 points and four assists in his 17 minutes.

The Jazz won their ninth game in a row, but lost Pete Maravich, the league's leading scorer, with a strained knee. It was not immediately known how long he would be lost to the club. He scored 26 points and collected 15 assists before leaving the game in the fourth quarter on a stretcher.

Nilsson Puts On a Show

By The Canadian Press

Ulf Nilsson gave another demonstration of why National Hockey League teams would like to lure him away from the World Hockey Association when he scored three goals in a row for Winnipeg Jets Tuesday night.

The three goals helped the Jets to a 7-2 win over Quebec Nordiques.

Nilsson and team-mate Anders Hedberg have been considering bids by NHL teams, and Tuesday night's show by the Swedish centre provided more than a hint to why one club has been reported offering the pair $150,000-a-year contracts.

Nilsson also had an assist on one of two goals by Willy Lindstrom and Hedberg chipped in with two assists. That gave Nilsson a season total of 22 goals and 51 assists while Hedberg has 36 goals and 35 assists.

In other WHA games Tuesday, Edmonton Oilers beat Indianapolis Racers 6-4 and Houston Aeros defeated Birmingham Bulls 4-2.

The loss dropped Quebec to fifth place, one point behind Edmonton, while Winnipeg pulled to within four points of the league leading New Engand Whalers.

"We were working hard," said Nilsson. "But I can't understand the way the Nordiques played. I know they're hurting, but they should be playing better than that in front of their home fans."

Several Jets players complained about bad ice conditions in the Quebec Coliseum and Nordiques coach Marc Boileau agreed.

"It's a crime to play professional hockey on ice like that," said Boileau.

At Birmingham, goalie Wayne Rutledge stopped 25 shots in the final period to preserve Houston's victory. The Bulls outshot the Aeros 41-25 through three periods.

"He hadn't played in about two months, but he was unbelievable in the third period," Sonmor said.

'Never Stronger' Says WHA Boss

HARTFORD, Conn. (CP) — The World Hockey Association said Tuesday it has attracted crowds averaging 8,238 this season, six-per-cent ahead of the final figure in 1976-77.

The league said the 1977-78 figures include games of Sunday, Jan. 29. In 1976-77, the average crowd was 7,795.

Prompted by the attendance report, WHA president Howard Baldwin said in a news release: "Looking at these figures, there can be only one possible conclusion. The WHA has never been stronger."

Munro's Priorities Haven't Changed Much

Jim TAYLOR

You cannot fool John Munro. Never mind prison riots, unemployment, and a Solicitor-General who admits to forgery. John Munro knows the key issue facing this country today.

The sale of Hamilton Tiger Cats to Harold Ballard, he says, poses a threat to national unity. Don't worry about a pension plan that's running out of money. Fret not over bilingualism, biculturalism or a nation coming apart. Don't despair that the RCMP is giving a whole new meaning to May the Force Be With You.

Oh, John's got the goods on him, all right. He listed them at a press conference Monday in Hamilton:

Harold's Maple Leafs haven't made it past the Stanley Cup quarter-finals over the past 10 yeaps.

Harold had something to say criticizing the Czechs in the process.

Harold has said things about gate equalization and Canadian content in the Canadian Football League "and I have to put that one on the table as a question mark in terms of his commitment to the CFL as a Canadian constitution."

Gad! The man's a regular Benedict Arnold.

Munro wants to make it perfectly clear that he was speaking as the MP for Hamilton East and not as a cabinet minister, which must be a relief to Pierre Elliott Trudeau. He also said he didn't plan to institute any government action to stop the sale—although he has been talking to CFL owners to convince them to veto it.

Now, as much as it makes a man feel warm all over to know an MP is out there in the trenches fighting the forces that would split our country asunder, there are a couple of points to be raised.

First, the whole exercise is academic because Harold isn't going to get the TiCats anyway. He needs three votes out of five from the Western Conference. He won't get them, because the league has a plan to raise the gate equalization ceiling from the present $75,000 per team, and all changes in the financial structure require a unanimous vote. No matter what he promises, the west doesn't want a maverick like Ballard in a position to rock every boat that comes along.

Winnipeg has already said no publicly. Edmonton says no privately. B.C. and Calgary are leery of the idea and Saskatchewan is scared stiff. Exit Harold, loudly.

Now we have another bidder: Northwest Sports—and maybe Mr. Munro would like to look at that one.

Northwest Sports is owned by Western Broadcasting, which owns Vancouver Canucks. If running a club with the Leafs' record makes Ballard a threat to national unity, what does owning the Canucks make Frank Griffiths?

Incidentally, John, Western Broadcasting doesn't own just the Canucks. It also owns CKNW, the radio station that has their broadcast rights; and large chunks of the CTV station that runs some of their Wednesday night games; and the radio broadcast rights to another CFL team, the B.C. Lions. If CTV was bidding seriously against the CBC for the CFL telecast rights, or there was a thorny issue regarding western radio rights, how do you suppose Northwest Sports might use the Hamilton vote?

It's been a while since John Munro surfaced, sportingly speaking. He was very big a few years back as head knock of Sport Canada, but since then he's been refreshingly silent.

My greatest memory of Canadian sport as cuddled under the wing of the Honorable John is of the Winter Olympics in Sapporo, and late-night knocks on the door.

John wasn't there, but Sport Canada was, in force—technically to aid the wire services and provide pictures, but actually to get involved in the damndest newspaper war in history.

It opened with the Canadian Olympic Association publishing a newspaper for Canadian athletes—The Sapporo Daily Bulletin, two pages, stationary size, black and white.

Stung, Sport Canada lashed back with a paper of its own— Highlights in Brief, with a three-color print job and a shot of the Canadian flag.

Before two more issues had passed, the Bulletin had gone to color and bumped to seven pages. By issue six the Bulletin had conquered, reducing Highlights In Brief to a gossip sheet carrying such things as a Canadian athletes writing off her interest in a member of another team. "We are just friends," she said, ending the suspense.

Newspapermen were drawn into the fray as a representative of, say, The Bulletin, would knock on the door pleading for copies of the next day's stories to carry in its pages.

"Sorry," we'd say, "but we already gave to the other guys."

He'd leave, crushed. Ten minutes later there'd be another knock, and a visit from Highlights in Brief.

"To hell with you guys," Hank Leclair, Mr. Munro's man in Sapporo, would fume. "Our paper isn't for you. It's for those kids on the Canadian team."

There were about 60 kids there. Leclair's press run was 2,500 daily—or 10 times that of the Bulletin. We didn't do much else, but we led the Winter Olympics in newspapers.

It's reassuring to note that Mr. Munro has retained his sense of priorities.

Sewage Lagoon Pipe Drains Into Cowichan

OUTDOORS
stewart lang

One wonders where it will stop?

While you can't really say the Cowichan River is being killed — nothing as dramatic as that — the new sewage system which the Village of Lake Cowichan pipes into this world-renowned fishing stream isn't exactly improving it.

After receiving several reports from anglers last year about the "slimy" conditions on the upper reaches, yours truly decided to pay a visit to the site of the sewage lagoon system downstream from Cowichan Lake.

So, on a sultry Aug. 31 afternoon, armed with six sample bottles and formaldehyde to "fix" the organic features of the water, two fishing buddies and I reconnoitred the tertiary treatment facility.

Each sewage lagoon is surrounded by a earthen dyke and one appeared to be leaking slightly in a couple of spots. The outflow from the final pool, which was covered with a greenish scum, flows down a long pipe which eventually leads right into the river. At several points along the bulldozed route of the earth-covered pipe a strong smell of sewage permeated the air.

I took two samples of water in each of three spots, one directly above the outfall, the second approximately 150 to 200 feet below where the pipe entered the river and a third about half to three-quarters of a mile downstream.

In each case, one of the bottles was fixed with the formaldehyde and the other frozen for chemical analysis at a later date.

Having no waders, I had to steel my stomach to wade into the river and take the final samples. The entire bottom of the river was coated with a thick layer of slimy gunk which clung to my bare feet and must make rather hazardous footing for fishermen.

Several days ago, I finally received the analysis of the samples.

Unfortunately, this won't be an expose in the traditional newspaper style — no matter how personally gratifying it might be.

The report stated that the water in all samples was "well within Pollution Control Board and Environmental Protection Agency (USA) standards for receiving and drinking water."

While I'll pass on drinking the water, the report revealed several things of interest.

Chemically, the samples revealed an increase in the nitrate ion and total phosphate content downstream from the outlet. The water in each case was optically pure with "no color or turbidity."

The biological analysis revealed another previously-suspected progression. There were 38 species in each bottle taken at the first two sampling sites and a total of 55 at the last site.

On the plus side, there was no increase in the species Gomphonema parvulum, which would indicate organic pollution and there was no trace of sewage fungus.

The over-all effect of the disposal system is to load the downstream waters of the river with nutrient materials which yield an increase in the downstream biomass. Tests also confirmed a general shift to green filamentous and blue-green algae.

Now, speaking as an angler, I'll point out a few of the negative factors.

To begin with, the algae blooms are unsightly and detract from the aesthetic aspect of any fishing experience. Constantly having to remove crud from your hook can't be chalked up as an enjoyable pastime.

And, despite some assurances that the increased nutrients might be beneficial to fish stocks, I've noticed the algae blooms tend to occupy roughly the same type of water favored by the brown trout and probably displace them by sheer physical presence.

Another point on the negative side is the fact that green algae tends to decompose in a mass, using up oxygen in the process — which would also tend to drive fish out of the immediate vicinity.

Other assurances that the algae masses are flushed out during the winter also contain a flaw. While the main masses might tend to get washed downstream, what about the stuff growing within the crevices of the gravel and stony substrate? No amount of current is going to wash it all away and any that remains might inhibit spawning activity.

Regional fisheries biologist George Reid of the fish and wildlife branch said the discharge wasn't affecting water quality — not in any way breached current guidelines.

"Of course, you never know," he added. "It might have subtle affect on the population that will all of a sudden show up."

Add this "subtle" but very visible affect to the other problems besetting this stream — increased fishing pressure, long-pending desires to channelize the lower reaches in the name of flood control, a gradual buildup of residential and industrial development in several areas and "natural" pollution cause by banks wearing away in logged-over sections or areas cut by roads — and the eventual total affect might be anything but slight.

The Cowichan was listed as a prime candidate for classification as a recreational river when the B.C. Wildlife Federation first started pressing for wild river legislation in 1968.

The Socred government of that era promised action and so did the succeeding administrations.

I wonder where the studies to support this important piece of legislation are now? Gathering dust?

In the case of the Cowichan, the entire river system has been compromised to a surprising extent. Yet it still manages to supply recreation for hundreds, if not thousands, of people each year.

Let's stop the degradation now.

PROELL-MOSER
. . . second Austrian winner

Annemarie Wins Downhill Crown

GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN, West Germany (AP) — Annemarie Proell-Moser of Austria won the women's downhill title at the world Alpine skiing championships today.

Irene Epple of West Germany was second, and Doris De Agostini of Switzerland came in third.

Proell-Moser clocked one minute, 48.31 seconds for the 2,800-metre track. Epple's time was 1:48.55 and De Agostini clocked 1:49.11.

Olympic giant slalom gold-medallist Kathy Kreiner of Timmins, Ont., skiing among the first seedings in downhill for the first time, finished 12th in 1:51.82 while Loni Kletti of Banff, Alta., in her first world competition, was 18th in 1:53.76.

The racers had nearly ideal conditions with sub-freezing temperatures and overcast skies. The downhill, originally scheduled for Tuesday, had to be postponed until today because of heavy snows and dense fog.

Proell-Moser's victory was the second title for the Austrian team in two races. In the opening men's downhill event Sunday, Josef Walcher won the world championship, ahead of West Germany's Michael Veith and Werner Grissmann of Austria, who was third.

Marie-Theres Nadig of Switzerland finished fourth in 1:49.64 and Cindy Nelson of the United States was fifth in 1:50.26.

Sports Firm Looks At Cats

VANCOUVER (CP) — Northwest Sports Enterprises Ltd. is still interested in participating in the ownership of Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Canadian Football League, Northwest director Bill McEwen said Tuesday.

McEwen said Northwest, a subsidiary of Western Broadcasting Co. Ltd., has not made an offer to purchase the CFL franchise from its present owners.

"Our position is that we were—and still are—interested in participating with Hamilton people in the ownership of the football franchise," McEwen said in an interview. "Northwest would not want to be in a majority ownership position.

"We believe the Tiger-Cats should be owned by Hamilton people and the president of the team should live in Hamilton."

Bays Tip Braves Off Unbeaten List

Bays toppled the only other unbeaten team with a narrow 74-68 decision over Belmont Braves in league action Tuesday.

In other tussles, Parkland Panthers dropped Esquimalt Dockers 56-41, Spectrum defeated Claremont Spartans 75-47, Mt. Douglas Rams mauled Stelly's Stingers 101-24 in an exhibition contest and Victoria Totems defaulted to Reynolds Roadrunners after pulling out of the league for the remainder of the season because of what coach Ash Valdal called "discipline problems."

Kelly Dukeshire set the pace with 25 points and Wayne Andrews added 23 for the Bays, who are now 7-0 and were playing without the services of flu-striken Ken Kirzinger and Blair Boland.

Dave Shokar dunked 22 points to lead the Spectrum victory and Mike Toakley fired 20 to lead Claremont.

In girls' league play, Reynolds Roadrunners ran their unbeaten streak to 8-0 with a 37-30 triumph over Victoria Tigers, Parkland downed Esquimalt 53-29, Oak Bay scuttled Belmont Tomahawks 67-21, Spectrum defeated Claremont 40-35 and Mt. Douglas topped Dunsmuir, 56-12.

Karen McComber led Roadrunners with 15 points and Sandy Lewis chalked up the same total for Tigers.

Parkland's win was led by Linda Rebbit and Louise Allan, who fired 10 points each, while Anna Shotton canned 15 in a losing cause for Esquimalt.

Cheryl Bell fired 35 points to spark Oak Bay.

Spectrum's offence was led by Cheryl Crabbe's 13 points while Yolanda Willers fired 10 to top Claremont.

Mt. Doug's top attackers were Heather Kirker (11) and Janine Prince (10).

HOCKEY TOUR SLATED

MUNICH, West Germany (Reuter) — The West German national hockey team will play five games in Ontario in preparation for the world tournament in Czechoslovakia.

Victory Closer

ADELAIDE (Reuter) — Australia moved nearer to winning the deciding fifth cricket test against India today despite a second innings collapse, in which the last six wickets went down for only 84.

The Australians were all out for 256 but that still left India with the massive target of scoring 493 for victory. By the close, the Indians were 101 for two.

The match has been extended to six days because the series is tied 2-2 so the Indians have plenty of time to score the runs. But history is against them.

MEXICANS WIN

The women's team topped University of Victoria Vikettes 15-3, 15-12 but the UVic squad took the third game 16-14.

The men's team beat the University of Calgary "A" squad 15-7, 15-9 and the Calgary men's "B" team beat Sea-Tac of Courtenay, 14-16, 15-7, 16-14.

The exhibition series continues tonight in Nanaimo as the teams warm up for the UVic International Invitational tournament this weekend.

Legion Laced

Bruce Tuck and Ed Beauchemin fired two goals each Tuesday to spark Saanich Braves to a 10-1 Patterson Division victory over Esquimalt Legion in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game at Pearkes Arena.

Single goals by Murray McLaren, Wayne Himmelman, Tom King, Tracy Patterson, Steve Craig and Don Stewart rounded out scoring for the Braves, who held period leads of 6-0 and 7-0.

Leafs Trim Bucks

Esquimalt Maple Leafs came up with a well-balanced attack Tuesday night to drop Western Homes Buckaroos 7-4 in a South Island Big Six Hockey League game at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Seven players took part in the Esquimalt scoring with Jerry Caldwell, Dale Cook, Chris Riddell, Steve Andrejkew, Bob Martin, Bayden Robinson and Murray Kennett connecting for singles.

Bill Pettinger (2), Dave Pettinger and Doug Berger replied for Buckaroos, who trailed 4-0 after the first period and 6-3 after the second frame.

Reds Charge Kuhn With 'Kangaroo Court'

By Associated Press

Cincinnati Reds were victimized by a "kangaroo court" in which baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn was "judge, jury and his own prosecutor," says Dick Wagner, the team's vice-president and general manager.

Club president Bob Howsam was equally strong in describing the hearing which led Kuhn to disallow a trade which would have sent pitcher Vida Blue to the Reds from Oakland A's for a minor league player and $1.75 million.

"I was amazed by the atmosphere in which the hearing was conducted," Howsam said. "It was more like an inquisition than the fact-finding procedure which the commissioner had indicated it would be."

Howsam added that "court action is being considered, but no decision has been reached."

Charlie Finley, owner of the Oakland club, has said he plans to take the baseball commissioner to court.

"I am going to ask the baseball owners and general managers to review the transcript in this case and see if they are not as shocked as I am by the decision and by the control of baseball's operation which the commissioner says he has," Howsam said.

The story was front page news in Cincinnati, which has been preoccupied with a recent blizzard.

The Reds revealed that they presented to National League president Chub Feeney a proposal which would involve more than just a trade for money and minor leaguer Dave Revering.

There was no response from the commissioner, the Reds said.

In San Diego, Ray Kroc, who says he was the only major league baseball owner to vote against renewing Bowie Kuhn's contract last year, called for firing the commissioner.

"I told one of the owners recently that unless we buy up Kuhn's contract, we're doomed," said the 75-year-old owner of San Diego Padres.

"I don't want a lawyer in that job. We should have a good businessman who knows what life is all about."

Kroc said Finley has the right to sell the contract of pitcher Vida Blue for $1.7 million if he wants.

The deal was nullified by Kuhn, saying the high price would have "an adverse effect on competitive balance" among all teams, economically.

Kroc said: "I think this is going beyond some reason . . . I wish somebody would explain to me the difference in paying $1.7 million to the Cincinnati Reds or to Joe Lipschitz, agent."

Cup Round Shocks

LONDON (Reuter) — Chelsea, Queen's Park Rangers and Millwall—all struggling to hold their own in the league—hit form in surprising style Tuesday to move into the last 16 of the English Football Association (FA) cup.

Meanwhile, first-division leaders Nottingham Forest had to battle to win a place in the fifth round, edging Manchester City 2-1.

Biggest winner of the night was Queen's Park Rangers, who crushed West Ham 6-1 in their fourth-round replay after being a goal down in four minutes.

In matches postponed from Saturday because of bad weather, Chelsea crushed Burnley 6-2 while Millwall, bottom of the Second Division, beat Luton Town 4-0. Ian Pearson, who was a school teacher until Christmas, had three Millwall goals.

To complete a good night for the city of Nottingham, Notts County earned the right to play Millwall with a surprise 2-1 win at Brighton.

In other games, Ted Juristа (6-8) defeated Don Matheson (6-8), 10-8, and Len Becker (5-9) won by default over Duncan's Gwyn Hughes (2-12). Hawkes finished with a 9-5 mark.

GORD CARMICHAEL
. . . defending mixed champ

Ladies Head North; Mixed Set for VCC

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

It's a slippery road to success again this weekend for several city curlers.

The main event certainly is the B.C. women's championships at Fort St. John, beginning Friday and continuing through until Tuesday in the round-robin way of things. Representing Victoria in the eight zone competition will be the Helen Garraway rink of the Racquet Club, the Island district champions. Other members of the rink are Fernande Hawkes, Shelagh Bell and Diana Pimlott.

Winner of the B.C. ladies will qualify for the Lassie national playdowns at Sault Ste. Marie, Feb. 24-March 3.

Meanwhile, the Mount Doug rink of John McGowan, Dale Garraway, Bruce Young and Mark Fuller will be contesting the high school provincial championship, an eight-team, round-robin tournament, at Hollyburn and the North Shore Winter Club, beginning Thursday at Hollyburn.

On the home front, at Victoria Club, the Island Mixed championships will take place with two rinks to qualify for the provincial championship at Nelson, Feb. 17-19. Defending Island champion, and again a South Island qualifier, is the Gordon Carmichael rink of Victoria with the same personnel — Lea Corke, Doug Benedict and Fran Schauerte.

Other Victoria rinks are skipped by Ray Benwell of Playland, Harvey Hodge of Victoria and Tim Horrigan of the Racquet Club.

From the North will come rinks skipped by Glen Harper and Gwyn Hughes of Duncan, Len Luoma of Holberg and Norm Thiessen of Nanaimo.

There are three changes from rink personnel announced earlier. Playing lead and second for Luoma are Connie McKingert and Larry Groves. They took part in the North playoff, but the rink was incorrectly identified at the time. Horrigan must secure a new lead as Judy Thompson is holidaying in Hawaii and unable to compete.

For Horrigan, it will be a chance at atdouble as he already has qualified for the PCCA men's finals. Thiessen was twice a defeated finalist in last weekend's Island men's playoffs while Harper and Hodge twice played together in the Brier men's national championship, and Harper has twice represented B.C. in the Canadian Mixed.

Draw for Friday's first games of the double-knockout event will take place at 8:30 p.m. First draw starts at 9 p.m.
The playdown will continue through Saturday and Sunday with draws at 2:30 and 8 p.m. Saturday and at 8 a.m. and 12 p.m. Sunday.

The Bridge Expert

At times, the safe, sound, orthodox lead turns out to be the winning one for the defenders. At other times, the gambling, unorthodox lead turns out to be the only one that defeats a contract. This subject is the theme of today's deal.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

This deal arose in a team-of-four match, and at both tables the bidding was identical. When the deal was played the first time, the West defender elected to make the gambling opening lead of the spade king. When it won the trick, he continued with his remaining spade, east's ace winning. East returned a third spade, which West ruffed.

West now made an excellent play when he came back with the four of trumps. From his position, he felt that his king was trapped. It was his hope, in leading a trump, that he might talk declarer out of finessing.

Declarer now thought long and hard. As he viewed the setup, West might well have started with the doubleton 4-2 of trumps originally. If such were the case, then East had been dealt the singleton king.

After about a minute of thought, declarer decided to play the trump suit on the assumption that West had started with the doubleton 4-2. So he put up dummy's ace. East discarded a spade, and West's king of trumps had just become promoted into the setting trick.

When the deal was replayed, West chose to make the safe opening lead of the diamond jack. Dummy's queen won the trick, after which the king and ace of diamonds were cashed, South discarding his three and ten of spades. Next came a club to South's ace, and this was followed by the lead of the queen of trumps. When West played low, so did declarer from dummy.

Another successful finesse against West's king of trumps was then taken, after which the trump ace felled West's king. Thus our second declarer's only loser was a spade trick.

Liberals Ready to Rap 'Big Government'

By PAUL WHITELAW
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Delegates to the Liberal Party's national convention here Feb. 24 to 26 will be carrying a message to Prime Minister Trudeau that they are fed up with "Big Government."

A consistent theme of so-called "mini-policy conventions" that have taken place across Canada in advance of the national gathering is the need for restraint in government spending and growth, Toronto area MP Martin O'Connell told reporters Tuesday.

The MP for Scarborough East, who is chairman of the national convention's policy deliberations, said there is a widespread feeling the government should leave more initiatives to the private sector.

O'connell told a news conference that a number of "regional" themes have also been evident during the preparatory meetings in the country's six major regions, including the need for stepped up "industrial development in western Canada."

While the approximately 3,000 delegates, alternates and observers expected to attend the national convention will be arriving in Ottawa with some grievances, the gathering is shaping up as a pre-election "love-in" tribute to Prime Minister Trudeau.

Senator Al Graham of Nova Scotia, president of the national Liberal Party, pointed out that delegates will not be voting on Trudeau's leadership.

He noted out that the party's constitution provides for a leadership accountability vote only at the national convention following a federal election.

At the Liberal's last national convention in 1975— the only one since the 1974 general election— delegates voted by a surprising 19 per cent margin in favor of a review of Trudeau's performance.

By contrast, 6.9 per cent of the delegates to the Progressive Conservative convention in November voted in favor of a review Joe Clark's leadership.

Graham, announcing organizational details for the gathering, described it as "perhaps the most critical national convention in the history of our party."

He noted that it would be the last convention before Trudeau calls an election, possibly as early as this spring or summer. Theme of the convention is "Canada: our future."

At a series of workshops, delegates will discuss resolutions dealing with topics ranging from national unity and the constitution to the economy and social security.

Trudeau and members of his cabinet will face questions from rank-and-file Liberals at a so-called "accountability session" during the convention's first night, described by one organizer as the "highlight" of the gathering.

Senator Joan Neiman of Ontario, a co-chairperson of the convention, said the questioners — at least most of them — will be pre-selected by leaders of the workshop discussions.

She noted this selection process was designed to assure that questions to the Prime Minster and cabinet members came from a geographical cross section of Canada.

However, she added that other questions could be asked by rank-and-file members who chose to line up at microphones placed throughout the convention hall.

The English and French television networks of the CBC have agreed to broadcast live the "accountability session," said MP Jim Fleming of York East, another Toronto area riding, who is the convention's communications chairman.

He noted there were "indications" that other TV networks did not plan live coverage of the convention.

Delegates will have an opportunity to vote on resolutions emerging from workshop discussions, but only if at least 25 delegates call for debate at a closing-day plenary session.

Delegates will have to pay $175 each to register at the convention, but Fleming pointed out that no delegate's combined registration and travel costs would exceed $275.

Diversity Barred To Air Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Air Canada won't be allowed to branch into areas outside air travel and connected tourism, the Commons decided Tuesday.

MPs agreed unanimously with Senate action deleting a clause in a bill reorganizing the Crown air line which would have allowed Air Canada to move into unspecified fields with cabinet approval.

The bill reorganizes Air Canada's corporate structure and breaks its formal links with Canadian National Railways, of which it has been a subsidiary. It now requires only royal assent to become law.

The legislation cleared the Commons during the fall sitting of Parliament and was sent to the Senate which amended it to change a clause that many felt gave the cabinet the freedom to permit Air Canada to enter businesses completely divorced from its major job of flying people.

The government had refused demands for the change from the opposition in the Commons but bowed when the Senate made changes and sent the legislation back to the Commons.

MPs took advantage of Tuesday's debate to attack Air Canada's proposed takeover of Nordair, a regional air carrier operating lucrative foreign charters and providing scheduled service to points in Ontario, Quebec, the Northwest Territories and the United States.

Herb Gray (L—Windsor West) said he is appealing to the combines investigation branch and the Canadian transport commission in efforts to stop the purchase, which he said could lead to more expensive and less frequent service to Hamilton and Windsor, Ont.

Que. Good Investment, Diplomat Assures U.S.

SAN FRANCISCO (CP) — The Canadian ambassador to the United States assured U.S. businessmen Tuesday that the Quebec government honestly wants the help of private business and that attitude will be maintained "regardless of the path of political discussion in Quebec."

Ambassador Peter Towe said in a speech to a businessmen's conference here that the election of the separatist Parti Quebecois government added "an element of political uncertainty" to the Canadian economic scene and economic activities suffered accordingly.

But he added that such problems are balanced by other factors:

"Practical co-operation, especially in economic matters between the federal government in Ottawa and the Quebec provincial government, continues as with previous Quebec governments, which have also been vigorous defenders of provincial rights.

"The Quebec government has stated that it needs investment, both domestic and foreign, to foster balanced economic development. It has sought — and I think quite honestly — to assure business of its intentions.

"Its economic policy, generally traditional in its approach, is aimed at promoting the strong, healthy business climate in the province, as is that of the federal government," Towe said.

"Regardless of the path of political discussion in Quebec, there is no reason to believe these attitudes towards business will change."

Towe, however, predicted that Canada would weather its unity crisis and remain united.

At a news conference later, the ambassador said he is not asking U.S. businesses to invest in Quebec out of benevolence toward Canada.

Maintaining commerical dealings with Quebec would be in the interests of the companies' shareholders and the companies should act for that reason, Towe said.

First, he said, Quebec continues to offer good business opportunities and, second, if Quebec were to separate, the holding of the companies in other parts of Canada might be damaged by the break-up of Canada.

"There investment in Quebec would probably be safer than in some other parts of Canada," he said.

Thus, Towe said, it is in the interests of U.S. companies to strengthen Canadian unity by maintaining investment and other dealings with Quebec and other parts of Canada.

HFC Pleads Not Guilty

QUEBEC (CP) — Household Finance Corp. of Canada has pleaded not guilty to a false advertising charge under Quebec's Consumer Protection Act.

The charge arises from the company's practice of sending out certificates for loans of $506.94, without telling customers that repayment of the loan with interest would cost $660.

The consumer protection office says it warned the company in November, 1976, to stop the practice, but that it continued.

Slain RCMP Fund Swells

VIRDEN, Man. (CP) — Donations for the family of slain RCMP Const. Dennis Onofrey are pouring into a local bank at a rate of more than $1,000 per day.

A trust fund in the name of Const. Onofrey's young widow Paula has grown to $7,000 since it was established last Thursday, said R. H. Cowle, manager of the Virden Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

"We have two girls just writing receipts. Donations have come from all over Manitoba. Now some are starting to come in from other provinces too."

Base Pay Criticism Mounting

OTTAWA (CP) — Pressure has been mounting among politicians and some businessmen in recent weeks for a hold-the-line approach to federal and provincial minimum wages.

The latest foray against minimum wages, which govern the least amount employers can pay their workers, came Tuesday at the meeting of federal and provincial tourism ministers.

The ministers were presented with a trade department discussion paper on the industry, which cited increases in minimum wages, especially in the provincial sector, as a chief cause of the country's estimated $1.7 billion travel deficit in 1977.

Minimum wages have sharply outpaced those in the U.S. in recent years, the paper said. The federal minimum wage was 12 per cent below that of the U.S. in 1967 but by 1977 stood at $2.90 an hour compared with $2.30 an hour in the U.S.

Provincial minimum wages have had an even greater impact upon the tourist industry, the paper said. They now range between a high of $3.27 an hour in Quebec to a low of $2.50 in Newfoundland.

Some federal politicians, notably Transport Minister Otto Lang, have said the minimum wages have made the cost of travel higher in Canada than in the U.S. Americans have been discouraged from travelling in Canada and the cost of domestic travel has made foreign destinations more attractive, federal officials say.

About 70 per cent of the money spent by foreign travellers in Canada and by Canadians is related to the U.S.

Devaluation of the Canadian dollar last year has significantly reduced the differential between the U.S. and Canadian wage rates but much of the travel deficit in 1977 was registered in the early part of the year.

Studies of the wage structure indicate that many workers in tourist industries are being paid at or slightly more than the minimum wage.

Although some U.S. states have minimum wages exceeding the federal minimum, about 70 per cent of U.S. workers were covered by the federal limit of $2.30 last year. In contrast, only five to eight per cent of Canadian workers are covered by federal wage legislation.

Small businesses in the U.S. have a further advantage in that they are not obliged to pay the minimum wage.

PCs Slam Clark's Levesque Visit

Before the meeting, former prime minister John Diefenbaker wrote Clark a stiff letter questioning the strategy of such a visit in an election year.

It was up to the Opposition leader, Diefenbaker argued, to stand up against the separatist premier while pointing out that Levesque and Prime Minister Trudeau are old comrades that may still be in league with each other.

Diefenbaker apparently had an ally in Clark's camp. Former Liberal aide Duncan Edmonds, now Clark's chief policy adviser, is said to have opposed the visit on similar grounds. But he was over-ruled, largely because the visit had already been arranged.

Olympic Tourist Boom was Wash-Out

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's Olympic summer of 1976 did not result in the anticipated boom for the country's tourist industry, says a study commissioned by the Bank of Montreal.

John Iton, a McGill university economist who undertook the study, says in a report to be released today that the number of tourists visiting Canada dropped to 33.8 million in 1976 from 35.9 million the previous year.

Tourists spent $1.94 billion in Canada in the Olympic year, an increase of 6.9 per cent over 1975. But the inflation rate of 7.5 per cent nullified the gain, since customers were spending more money to buy fewer goods and services.

Iton calculates that the Montreal Summer Games were directly responsible for between $77 million and $135 million in tourist spending, far below the predicted $400 million.

The optimistic predictions had been fed by the experiences of Japan, where tourist revenue went up by 15 per cent during the 1964 Olympics, and West Germany, where revenue jumped 21 per cent in 1972.

Receipts from U.S. visitors to Canada were "especially disappointing," says Iton, despite the fact that an estimated 155,000 Americans came to Quebec solely because of the Games.

Iton calculates that an additional 55,000 vistors from overseas came just for the Olympics.

Tourists who came especially for the Olympics spent an estimated $63 million, while Canadians from other parts of the country who came to Montreal spent $9.6 million.

It cost $1.06 billion to build Olympic facilities in Montreal, and Iton figures that the construction work injected about $1 billion into the economy which otherwise would not have been spent. The remaining money probably would have been generated anyway by other projects, even without the Games, the study says.

Federal, provincial and municipal governments received about $526 million.

New Penitentiary Program Speeding Ahead: Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is speeding ahead with penitentiary reform and with construction of new federal prisons, says Rod Blaker, government spokesman on penitentiaries since the resignation of Francis Fox as Solicitor-General.

Blaker, Fox's parliamentary secretary, was replying in the Commons Tuesday to Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon), who said he would abstain from questions on handling of ongoing hostage incidents at penitentiaries in British Columbia and New Brunswick to avoid endangering life and safety.

Blaker said the government is acting with speed in meeting sweeping recommendations for reform made by a special Commons subcommittee last June. He declined to elaborate later in an interview, saying only that the government will report soon to the Commons justice committee.

The government already has announced it will move all maximum-security prisoners at the British Columbia penitentiary in New Westminster, where one of the incidents is taking place, to a new prison in Agassiz by November. The other incident is at Dorchester, N.B.

Tories Hit Harbor Tax

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative MPs Tuesday said they will vote against proposed new legislation governing harbors because the government plans to impose a $50 harbor licence fee on fishermen.

"To an Atlantic fisherman $50 can sometimes be a very princely sum and hard to come by," Lloyd Crouse (PC-South Shore) saidduring Commons debate. He called it another unfair tax.

During study of the bill in a Commons committee, he said Liberal MPs had opposed a Conservative proposal to defer the move years. Fishermens' income should increase substantially in five years as foreign fishing is gradually phased out, he said.

Donald Munro (PC-Esquimalt-Saanich) echoed Crouse's view. He added the fisheries minister, who has the power to set such fees, is getting too much power also to undertake harbor construction and repair projects and appoint officials to administer the new legislation.

"This is just open to porkbarrelling of the worst possible kind," Munro said. He said in effect the government was asking MPs to legalize the patronage system and recommended, with tongue in cheek, that Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc "make use of it before the election."

U.S. Studying New Levy On Canadian Fish Export

WASHINGTON (CP) — The U.S. Customs Service is investigating whether countervailing duties should be imposed on more than $200 million of fish imported from Canada each year.

The investigation, second of its type in less than a year, involves determining whether Canadian government support programs for fishermen and fish processors constitute an export grant or bounty under the U.S. tariff act, officials said.

If customs officials conclude that the programs do indeed serve as export subsidies, countervailing duties of up to the value of the subsidy might be considered, officials said.

The treasury department, in announcing the investigation late last week, issued a preliminary determination that three Canadian programs appear to constitute grants or bounties.

These are: direct federal payments to fishermen and processors; assistance for financing ship construction, and department of regional economic assistance grants to the Newfoundland fishing industry.

The group of U.S. fishermen who petitioned the department for the inquiry — the Fishermen's Marketing Association of Seattle — said these programs give Canadian fishermen as unfair advantage and countervailing duties should be applied to 20 categories of fish imports under the U.S. tariff schedule.

"We're very concerned about the potential regional impact of this investigation, particularly with unemployment as high as it is now in the Atlantic region," a Canadian official said.

The association's petition followed a treasury department ruling in another case last April involving only three categories of Canadian fish exports.

The department determined at that time that the direct payments and vessel subsidies did constitute an export bounty or grant, but the countervailing duty was waived after Canada agreed to eliminate 97 per cent of the subsidies for those three types of fish.

The waivers in that case, which did not involve the regional assistance grants, expires Jan. 3, 1979. The total annual value of U.S. imports of fish in those three categories was about $3.3 million.

Since April, other U.S. fishermen have been seeking investigations into possible extra duty on Canadian fish exports.

A Washington group, the National Federation of Fishermen, filed a petition in late December for a third inquiry, this time involving Atlantic lobster and scallops as well as fresh and frozen fish. No action has been taken on that request.

Canadian officials, who now are preparing a response to the latest inquiry, say they hope the U.S. will either dismiss the petition or grant Canada another waiver.

If the U.S. moves toward general international policy, the fish problem would be resolved more easily.

Pope Given Bum Steer?

DETROIT (AP) — How do you tell the Pope his car may be fallible?

That was the question facing General Motors Corp. executives today. The Detroit Free Press says the federal auto safety agency raised the point regarding the 1960 Cadillac in the Vatican garage.

In a report from Washington, the newspaper said the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration wants Pope Paul to know the car may have a defective steering mechanism.

The agency discovered the defect in 1960 Cadillacs in 1973, but a recall was ordered for the cars in the United States only recently, when General Motors lost a long legal battle.

"The safety administration lacks the authority to recall cars in foreign countries," the newspaper said.

GM spokesman Colleen Belli said the automaker routinely extends domestic recalls to affected automobiles overseas and in Canada, and the Pope's car will be fixed.

REJECTION

VERNON (CP) — Delegates to a meeting of the Interior Vegetable Marketing Board have voted to reject a new farm income assurance program outlined by Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt last week.

The delegates approved the resolution after an unscheduled address by Pat Hibbert, president of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture.

Hibbert told the delegates that the proposals were a watered-down version of existing programs

Nujoma Regime Is Out

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (Reuter) — Prime Minister John Vorster said Monday that South-West Africa, or Namibia to the United Nations, will become independent this year, but South Africa will not hand over the territory to the "adventurer Sam Nujoma with his Marxist organization."

Nujoma is leader of the South-West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO).

Vorster said Foreign Minister Pik Botha will go to New York next month to discuss independence for the territory with foreign ministers of the five Western countries of the UN Security Council — Canada, Britain, France, the United States and West Germany.

He told parliament: "This is a very high level for discussions, and we are going to participate in the hope and trust that they will now lead to finality and that we can overcome the difficulties."

South Africa rules South-West Africa in defiance of UN resolutions, since the mandate given it by the now defunct League of Nations was revoked by the UN.

Vorster said: "Certain demands are being put to us by SWAPO and we are not prepared to give in to those demands."

MPs Charge RCMP Coddle

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs charged Tuesday the federal government is reluctant to discipline RCMP officers involved in illegal acts but anxious to give the federal force all the power it says it needs without judicial approval.

The charges by Progressive Conservatives and New Democratics came during a series of questions in the Commons concerning illicit activities by the RCMP.

Justice Minister Ron Basford, answering as acting solicitor-general in place of the resigned Francis Fox, said new legislation allowing the RCMP to open mail will be a short-term measure.

He said it will expire when a federal commission investigating RCMP improprieties issues its report.

But, the minister added that no action will be taken against those responsible for the illicit opening of mail by RCMP security forces until after the commission gives its report.

Stuart Leggatt, NDP justice critic, said charges should be laid against RCMP officers who committed illegal acts in the same way other citizens face charges for crimes.

Leggatt (New Westminster) said the government was prejudicing findings of the commission under justice David McDonald by bringing in legislation that will give the RCMP power it was exercising illegally for 40 years.

Basford said the government is acting at the request of police forces in bringing in legislation now.

The government has said it needs legally-sanctioned mail opening to fight narcotics trafficking and for security reasons.

Elmer MacKay (PC—Central Nova) said the government can withhold documents from royal commissions on grounds of national security with no provision for judicial review of the facts.

MacKay said that process should be reviewed to make certain it is not abused by governments.

A spokesman for the McDonald commission said earlier it was not consulted on the new legislation. Part of the commission's mandate is to make recommendations to Ottawa.

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent demanded for the second day the dismissal of RCMP superintendent J. A. Nowlan who he said authorized the illegal Montreal break-in to secure Parti Quebecois records in 1973.

Broadbent said Nowlan knew in June about the break-in but failed to inform Fox until late fall, thereby neglecting his duty to inform the minister.

But Prime Minister Trudeau said it was up to the McDonald commission to determine whether the break-in was illegal or thought to be illegal.

Broadbent said the commission will not make its final report for two or three years and that questions would be left hanging.

Trudeau replied that the government will insist on an interim report if it appears the findings will take a long time to collect.

The NDP leader also asked Basford to explain why an inquiry, investigating RCMP activities in Quebec, was denied access to Nowlan's reply to a query from RCMP in Quebec as to whether the break-in was legal.

Broadbent said the reply authorized the break-in and that there was no reason to keep it from the Quebec provincial inquiry.

Basford said such information was not held back by Fox.

Here's a Money Saver

Thinly sliced corned beef can go a long way

Because the spiced beef recipe I gave you last April brought in rave letters I made up a smaller amount because I bought a whole flat lean brisket. That is my recipe for today and it is a big money saver and convenience for slicing hot and wafer thin cold.

But for weeks I have been wanting to alert readers to the mounting promotion of the metric system in Canada. Treat your eight-ounce measuring cups and familiar tablespoon, teaspoon, one-half teaspoon and one-quarter teaspoon measures with tender care for they may become a thing of the past. You will need them to measure the ingredients in my cookbook and daily columns.

SPICED BRISKET BEEF
NOTE: This requires two weeks' preparation.

6½-lb. whole flat (not rolled) lean brisket of beef
5 tsp. salt petre (drug store)
2 tbsp. brown sugar
1½ tsp. ground cloves
1½ tsp. ground nutmeg
1½ tsp. ground alspice
½ c. (no more) pickling or canning (non-iodized) salt
2 tsp. finely crumbled bay leaves

In a medium bowl mix well the salt petre, sugar, spices, sat and bay leaves. Line a pyrex or corningware or enamelled baking dish of a size to just accommodate the flat brisket (do not use metal) with an old tea towel.

It should be fairly strong cloth. Lay brisket on it. With the sharp point of a knife scratch the surface a little. Sprinkle some of the salt mixture over and with your fingers rub it into the meat.

Use half for top side and rub and rub until it is moistened by the meat and will cling. Now turn brisket over and rub remaining half of the salt mixture into other knife-scratched side. Fold sides of towel over to cover completely, tucking in ends. Store in refrigerator. Every day for two weeks turn it over and pummel it with your finger tips for 2 or 3 minutes. The towel becomes soaked with bloody brine but this is all to the good. After a fortnight remove cloth and wash brisket in cold water. (Soak towel in cold water before washing it.)

Wash your marinating dish and place brisket in it. Add 1 cup water, cover tightly with foil and roast at 250 deg. Fahr. 5 or 5½ hours.

The beauty and best use of this spiced brisket is sliced wafer thin cold. But it makes a wonderful hot supper sliced thinly and served with mashed potatoes. The Irish would add cabbage to the mashed potatoes and call it Colcannon.

Try Pancakes With Cheese

Most people love the taste of pancakes. And so it's nice to know that there is one day in the year dedicated especially to them — Shrove Tuesday. It's the day before Ash Wednesday, the beginning of Lent. The name came from the old custom of confessing (being "shriven") on that day. The English began the tradition of eating pancakes on the Tuesday to use up the milk, butter and eggs forbidden during the Lenten fast.

Great pancakes must always be light, and thoroughly cooked. The lightness comes from the batter; the cooking know-how is acquired with care and practice. Pancakes should be cooked over medium heat. The frying pan or griddle must be of heavy metal, greased with just enough oil or fat to evenly cover the bottom.

Another plus for pancakes is their price. They can make an economical meal and also offer food value because of the milk and eggs used in the batter. Remember also, when fruit, cheese or other ingredients are included or served with them, the food value is further upgraded.

These cheese pancakes cost about 15 cents a serving and because of the addition of cheese provide a good source of protein and calcium. Notice that skim milk powder has been used to replace fluid milk. This change helps lower the cost but not the food value.

CHEESE PANCAKES
500 mL all purpose flour
15 mL baking powder
5 mL salt
175 mL skim milk powder
250 mL (about 100 g) grated cheddar cheese
2 beaten eggs
500 mL water
25 mL melted margarine

Mix dry ingredients and cheese. Combine eggs, water and melted margarine. Add to dry ingredients and mix quickly until just combined. For each pancake, drop 50 mL batter on well greased hot fry pan. Cook until bubbles form on surface (2 to 3 minutes). Turn and brown other side (2 to 3 minutes). Makes about 20 pancakes Serve with syrup and butter if desired.

Make Homemade Bread 'Special

When you want to bake something special, decide on making bread. Not the ordinary bread that can be bought in any market, nor even a bread that looks like the commercial product.

Homemade bread should always be special, that is, especially good. Some people refer to it as "cake" but usually these are non-bread makers.

As they find the extra flavor and texture that results from using the coarser, unrefined grain products, and realize that your kind of bread is for enjoying with cheese, salads and meat courses, enthusiasm begins to grow and thought is given to using other similar ingredients. This is the way new recipes are born.

Apart from oat flakes which are like rolled oats but a little coarser and darker, there are wheat flakes, rye flakes and barley flakes — all for use in baking. Just now there are likely to be filberts from one's own garden or mixed nuts in the shell left from holiday festivities. Don't let nuts be only a feature of entertainment. Use them often to enrich and add flavor to homemade bread.

Today's bread recipes contain no fruits or nuts. Sugar is minimal, only enough to ensure action of yeast in rising.

Quantities are small so that a trial does not involve a great deal of work; and also that older homemakers wanting a couple of small loaves will be able to handle the mixing with a minimum of effort.

One good thing about a trial run of bread making at home, it is always edible even though it may not be perfect the first time. But there is no need for it to be less than perfect if the yeast is lively and the dough is well risen before baking.

You will notice these breads are all put to rise just once into a cold oven with the low heat turned on at 35 deg. C. (about 95 to 100 deg. F.) after the bread is put in.

The beating that is done as flour and other ingredients (rolled grains, brown rice) are added takes the place of one rising. Air is incorporated into the dough and expands in the warm oven, so that it takes about only 25 to 30 minutes to rise to double bulk.

Although a conventional loaf pan is 9x5x3-inches, a smaller one 7x3½x2-inch is quite suitable for a small loaf. I also use a small casserole to make a round loaf as a second small loaf from most recipes.

BROWN RICE BREAD

½ cup warm water
1 tsp sugar
1 Tbsp granular yeast (1 pkt.)
1 cup hot water
1 Tbsp soft margarine
1 tsp salt
2 tsp sugar
1 small egg
1¼ cup wholewheat flour
¼ cup wheat germ
½ cup skim milk powder
2 cups (approx) unbleached flour

In large warm mixing bowl, add 1 tsp sugar to warm water. Stir to mix; sprinkleyeast on surface. Let stand 10 minutes.

Meanwhile measure hot water into small bowl. Add margarine, salt and 2 tsp sugar. Mix in milk powder for added protein.

When cooled a little, add to yeast mixture in mixing bowl. Beat in egg, then add cooked rice and beat well, adding wholewheat flour while continuing to beat.

Now begin adding unbleached flour gradually beating as long as possible with a wooden spoon (easier to handle than metal) and only adding enough to make a stiff, smooth batter.

Spoon into well greased pans (2) until a little over half filled.

Put pans into cold electric oven; turn dial to 35 deg. C. (95 to 100 deg. F.). After 10 minutes turn dial off but leave pans in to rise to about double.

Then turn to hot 220 deg. C. (425 deg. F.) for 10 minutes to stop rising and begin baking. After 10 minutes turn down to moderate 177 deg. C. (350 deg. F.) to bake, about 20 minutes more until done. Cover loosely with foil if browning seems too rapid.

This bread has a lovely crust, chewy yet tender. Turn out all breads at once on wire rack to cool. This keeps the crust crisp.

MODIFIED RYE BREAD

Scald 1-cup milk from milk powder. Pour in to mixing bowl and add:

1 Tbsp sugar
1 tsp salt
2 Tbsp soft margarine

Stir until melted. Allow to cool to lukewarm

Meanwhile dissolve in small bowl

1 tsp sugar in
½ cup warm water

Over this sprinkle

1 Tbsp granular yeast (1 pkt)

Let this stand in warm place 10 minutes until bubbly. Add yeast mixture to milk mixture. Stir together.

Beat in

½ cup graham flour (use wholewheat if necessary)
¼ cup wheat germ
1½ cups dark rye flour
1½ cups unbleached flour

Add these flours gradually, first beating vigorously, then as batter becomes heavier beat as much as you are able. Withhold the last one-half cup unbleached flour, using only enough to make a stiff moist batter.

Grease two medium size bread pans. Spoon batter into both, filling about halfway. Smooth tops a little with spoon.

Place pans in cold oven; turn dial to 35 deg. C. (95 to 100 deg. F.) After 10 minutes turn dial off. Leave pans in to rise to about double.

Then turn dial to hot 220 deg. C. (425 deg. F.) for 10 minutes to stop rising and begin baking.

After 10 minutes turn dial down to moderate 177 deg. C. (350 deg. F.) to bake, about 25 minutes until brown and bread is loosened from sides of pan.

This is also a lovely, chewy bread, though of surprisingly fine texture. It is very satisfying so a little lasts a long time.

If you take out food for winter picnics, Brown Rice Bread and this Modified Rye Bread are the ones to make. Palatable with cheese, celery, fruits, nuts and other easily packed foods.

And Now the Remainder Of Tiny's Chinese Feast

tiny bennett

Last week I wrote on a six-course Chinese meal but lack of space allowed me to deal only with Egg Foo Yung shrimp in detail.

Now I'd like to describe the rest of the meal, including the no-waste philosophy that makes the over-all Chinese cuisine the best in the world.

We are going to deal with Egg Drop Soup, Easy Style Chicken with pineapple, Stir-fry Bean Sprouts, Rice and Crispy Noodles. All for the cost of a medium-sized fryer-broiler chicken, a can of chunky pineaple, a can or fresh pack of bean sprouts, two eggs, two onions, two stalks of celery, three green onions (scallions), a cup of long grain rice, and drips and drabs of this and that.

This involves a cooking plan.

Start by cutting up a chicken into pieces for oven baking. Cut off legs and thighs and the wings into two pieces, with the tips put into a stewpot, dividing each breast lengthwise and cutting into two-inch hunks. Cut off all meat from around the carcass, and put the carcass and wing tips together in the stewpot. Cover with cold water and set on the stove to simmer.

To the stewpot add one small onion, a stick of celery and a small carrot, and simmer covered for three hours.

Put the cut chicken into a large bowl and adding two tbs. of soy sauce, one tbs. dry Sherry or dry Vermouth, plus one tbs. cornstarch, marinate, stirring to mix now and then.

At this point, rinse the bean sprouts in ice water, drain well, put into a large bowl and add one large onion, one stalk celery and one fresh green pepper, all thinly sliced. Mix lightly and chill.

Forty minutes before dinner draw two cups of the chicken stock from the stewpot, strain into a smaller pot, melt in two chicken cubes and taste for seasoning. It should need about one tsp. salt.

I go two ways on this — for plain white rice, or a golden yellow, savory rice through the addition of one tsp. of turmeric. It's your choice, but I'd suggest you try it both ways, and would add that my guests eat more golden rice than the plain white.

Anyway, bring the seasoned stock to the rolling boil, and trickle in very slowly one cup of long grain rice, shake the pot to even it out AT THE FULL BOIL, clap on the lid and reduce the heat to as low as your stove will go. And don't peek for 45 minutes if you want to get beautiful rice.

At this point in our cooking we are 45 minutes away from the time to serve dinner, so set a wok on the stove if you have one, and you should, because they are fairly inexpensive. If not, hang a big skillet onto the large hot-ring of the stove, pour in a quarter-inch film of light oil — peanut, or any vegetable brand — and when the oil begins to make puddle rings, prepare to pre-cook the chicken.

Shake it up in a bag, or just roll it around a plate that holds flour, salt and pepper, and browning each piece in turn on all sides, put the cut-up chicken in a 300° F. oven, in a flat oven dish.

Then fry the drained pineapple cubes in the wok, or skillet, for only two minutes, pour in the juice from the can, and when it is merrily bubbling, add one tbs. soy sauce, one tbs. cornstarch, and when it thickens in a lovely clear sauce, spread it all over the chicken in the oven.

This gives about 30 minutes to go before serving time.

So wipe out the wok, or your skillet, add another quarter-inch of oil, swirl it on the highest heat, and when it pools, toss in the bean sprouts and mixed raw vegetables. (If they don't scream, the oil wasn't hot enough.)

But anyway, keep them moving by turning over and over in the Chinese stirfry system.

Give them two minutes of fast cooking on high heat, and then add, from our chicken stewpot, one cup of hot stock. Souce on two tbs. of soy sauce, and then one tbs. cornstarch, and when that flavored sauce thickens, turn this vegetable dish into a table-to-oven server, and pop into the oven with the chicken.

Cut the lid off a can of crispy noodles, put the lid back on, and stick that back into the oven.

Now make up the Egg Foo Yung, as I advised previously, and put that too in the oven, coverd with the Chinese brown sauce.

And we are back to our basic chicken stock, for our very first course in our six-course Chinese meal. And we simply strain the stock into a saucepan, add a couple of chicken cubes, if necessary, add a flavor in herbs of our choice, and allow them to blend.

Then, we chop three green onions to quarter-inch rounds, including the green, bring the stock to a rolling boil, and dribble in two fresh eggs, lightly beaten, a little at a time. Beat it, and serve it. With five superb Chinese dishes to follow.

dear abby

Don't Hesitate To Call Police

DEAR ABBY: Last week I read another report of a woman who was dragged from her home by her husband and shot on the street in full view of neighbors and several witnesses — and no one helped.

It got me to thinking about what I would do if I were to witness such an act. Of course I would notify the police, but in the meantime the poor woman could suffer a terrible beating and even be killed. What else could I do to help, other than call the police?

I certainly couldn't attack a man who had a gun or a knife. He could easily kill me, and I have a responsibility to my family to stay alive. If I were to shoot the man and he lived, I'm afraid he would come after me next.

Please, Abby, ask your law enforcement friends to give some advice to people who want to help, but also want to remain alive.

N.M.

DEAR N.M.: All my law enforcement friends and consultants agree that the wisest move is to call the police immediately, and be sure to stress that it is an emergency.

DEAR ABBY: I am a reasonably attractive 27-year-old woman. A friend, also a woman, age 30, went with me to a very nice supper club for an evening out. We were not there to hunt male company. All we wanted was a cocktail, dinner and girl talk. Obviously we were not flirting with any of the men in the place.

Halfway through dinner, a man about 50 came in with a woman and took the table next to ours.

Just as they were leaving, the man stopped by our table and said, "May I ask you a question? Are you two in love — with each other?"

We were too stunned to say anything at the time, but after they left we thought of many appropriate Abby-like retorts.

Later we learned that the man is a judge! Such gross rudeness and poor judgment in anyone is hard to take, but in one who is supposed to rule impartially on complicated issues, it's frightening!

Were we wrong to be there? Somehow I can't believe the judge would have asked that question of two men dining together.

INCREDULOUS

DEAR INCRED: Don't bet on how this judge would have judged two men dining together. Anyone who is so curious about the sexual preferences of strangers that he would inquire, obviously has a serious problem in that area. And no, you were not wrong to have been there.

your health

By L.L. COLEMAN, MD

Can you explain the simplified "needle" operation for a prostate condition? I've been told that I need surgery. I would like to find out where this can be done. — Mr. J. H. A.

Dear Mr. A.:

I have never heard of any type of surgery of the prostate referred to as a "needle" operation. I can, however, speculate that the operation you refer to is one done by electrocoagulation. It is known as the "trans-urethral resection."

There are a number of surgical techniques for the removal of the prostate. The choice, made by the surgeon, depends on the age of the patient, his general physical condition and the particular type of enlargement of the prostate.

Each case is individually studied before the choice of surgery is made. The patient himself, of course, does not play a role in making this decision.

Surgery of the prostate is remarkably safe, and the benefits that accrue can be very gratifying. Rarely is this operation done as an emergency. Far too often, because it is an elective procedure, some patients delay too long following the advice of their doctors. Then, a relatively simple procedure can be converted into a complicated one.

Be Clear About Nutrition Facts

By Ruth Fremes and Zak Sabry

Many people find nutrition a confusing subject, with many controversies, so that they give up in despair and go on eating whatever strikes their fancy or is presented to them. The confusion may come sometimes from scientists interpreting research information differently, which is a useful process in the development of any scientific study.

We should always allow scientists to disagree among themselves, but, the scientific message to society should be certain enough to be of some use and application. Most nutrition scientists when interviewed in public forums, give solid useful information so as not to confuse people. The trouble is with the pseudo-nutritionists.

What is confusing people about nutrition is having every Tom, Dick and Harry give his "views" on nutritional issues and having those mistaken for scientific facts. We heard an example of this situation on our local radio station recently. It was a talk-show with news, weather and music thrown in between interviews on a variety of subjects. The host interviewed a well-known and highly-qualified professor of nutrition on the subject of cholesterol and how to control it.

"Doctor, I eat two eggs a day. Is that too much?", asked the middle-aged host gleefully. "Yes, it probably would be wise for you to cut down on eggs," answered the professor.

He went on to explain that eggs are high in cholesterol and saturated fat and that eating them in excess (and, two eggs a day for a middle-aged man in the context of the average Canadian diet which is high in fat, is excessive) would lead to building-up of cholesterol in the blood, hardening of the arteries and increasing the risk of getting a coronary. The interview went on to its conclusion with the message loud and clear and the information concise and useful for any listener who is concerned or has reason to be concerned about his cholesterol.

Ten minutes later, on the same program, the host was chatting with a reporter, who is not a nutritionist. The cholesterol question was brought up and the reporter said that there was a great deal of controversy on the subject, "that you don't know whom to believe." The host agreed, saying that he wouldn't change his two eggs a day for anything. His doctor told him that if he eats enough whole grains it wouldn't affect him. We don't know how whole grains can protect against a coronary if the diet is high in saturated fat and in cholesterol.

Knowing what we do about the Canadian diet and considering the scientific evidence on the effects of high saturated fat and high cholesterol, we would think that the broadcaster will be further ahead changing his eating habit and his doctor, too.

The Nutrition Canada survey showed that almost half of our calories come from fat. A great part of that fat is in the form of saturated fat; not only from high-fat meats, butter, margarine and eggs, but also from coconut and palm oils added to processed foods. Saturated fats have the capacity to get the body to make more cholesterol or so conserve the cholesterol it has, with the end result of having higher levels of blood cholesterol.

One other problem with eggs, in addition to containing saturated fat, is they are rich in cholesterol. It is not only saturated fat and cholesterol in the diet that would raise blood cholesterol; sugar and salt, when taken in excess, also encourage the body to make more cholesterol. Excess sugar is converted to cholesterol and excessive consumption of salt is associated with high blood pressure which raises the chances of a coronary.

Some people argue that since the body is making its own cholesterol; it wouldn't matter whether the food itself is rich in cholesterol or not. Their argument is that the body would destroy or reject the cholesterol in the food and go on making its own in just the right amount. Not so. We don't know of any convincing scientific evidence to back this argument.

This is an important point to make. Nutrition is a science based on scientific experimentation and interpretation. It is not open for theories or testimonies. It is not what someone thinks is happening; it is what someone proves, according to the scientific experimental process, to be happening.

There are also those who think that it doesn't matter whether cholesterol is up or down; when it is time to die, we'll die. No one debates death, but, when coronary heart disease is the leading cause of death and when more and more middle-aged people are dying of it, it becomes a serious health concern. What's more, study after study shows that people with high blood cholesterol stand a greater chance than those with low blood cholesterol to get a coronary.

However, there is more to a coronary risk than diet. There is convincing scientific evidence that people who smoke are also in jeopardy. Other risk factors include high blood pressure, stress, excessive drinking, lack of exercise; not to mention heredity (coronary tendencies seem to run in families), and sex (men have it worse than women) and age (risk increases as we get older, which is all right since we have to die of something).

Of the many nutrition problems we face, diet and coronary heart disease appear to be the most controversial, and yet, when we examine the scientific evidence, the message we get is loud and clear: Cut down on fat, cut down on saturated fat, cut down on cholesterol, cut down on sugar, cut down on salt.

It may be human nature to create controversies, but, when the issue is a serious health concern, and when the scientific evidence is available, then it is only responsible to tell it as it is.

Fire Toll Rises

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The death toll from the weekend fire at the historic Coates House hotel rose to at least 16 Monday with firemen accusing city officials of providing faulty equipment and inadequate manpower to fight the blaze.

CHEDDAR FONDUE

1½ cups milk
¼ cup butter
2 tbsp. chopped green onions
1 tbsp. chopped parsley
1 tsp. salt

Cost of Democracy? $3.77 for Each Person

As embodied in Parliament, government estimates are $90.4 million for the current fiscal year which ends March 31.

That is $18.3 million more than a year earlier but works out to only about $3.77 for each person, based on a population of 24 million. Looked at another way, it comes to about $10,300 an hour, 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. That does not include the cost of elections or tax credits for political contributions.

Bill Clarke (PC—Vancouver-Quadra), an accountant, estimated in a Commons speech that a two-hour delay in a vote last week cost $18,000, taking into account the cost of the Commons alone.

Of course Parliament is only one part of the democracy. Provincial governments, cabinets, courts and the political parties are some other parts of the system.

Of the $90.4 million shown in the government figures, the Commons costs $74.4 million and the Senate $11.3 million. The Library of Parliament, which provides reference and research facilities for both houses, has a budget of $4.7 million.

Salaries, allowances and employee benefits for MPs come to $19,513,000. Senators get by on a collective $4,353,000. MPs get salaries of roughly $28,000 a year and tax-free allowances of about $13,000. Senators get the same salary but half the expense allowance. There currently are 357 of 364 MPs sitting and 90 of 104 Senators.

The cost estimates do not include extensive air travel, long-distance telephone calls, postage and printing of up to four newsletters a year, all free services to members. Also, many MPs have offices in their constituencies paid for by the Commons.

People who maintain the Parliament Buildings and grounds have to be paid, as do support staff for MPs and senators, security staff, translators, stenographers and all the other people deemed necessary to keep Parliament ticking.

It also costs money to print the minutes of both houses and their committees—about $8 million— and to provide live television coverage of the Commons—about $5 million.

The cut-rate restaurant open only to MPs, senators, ministers' assistants and journalists does not lose money, at least on paper, even though it serves four-course roast beef dinners for $2.75. Wine is 80 cents extra. The $2.75 pays for the food but not for the staff whose wages are classified under general operating expenses.

More than $1.4 million is budgeted for grants to international parliamentary associations and for associated travel expenses.

MPs have come under attack for voting themselves a pension plan which provides benefits after as little as six years in the House. Their pensions are geared to keep pace with the cost of living, a provision attacked by administrators of private pension plans as not possible in the private sector because it would be too expensive.

Clarke estimated in a Commons speech that Justice Minister Ron Basford, who has announced he will not seek re-election, could be getting a parliamentary pension of $112,000 in the year 2007 when he is 75 years old. That figure is based on annual inflation continuing at the 1977 rate of 9.5 per cent.

But Basford will need that $112,000 because a 60-cent loaf of bread will cost $7.35 in 2007, Clarke said. A new car will cost not $5,000 but $60,000. If inflation runs at an average rate of seven per cent a year, that same car would still cost $35,000.

FREIGHTERS SUSPECTED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Environmental Protection Service (EPS) suspects that one or more of the freighters anchored in English Bay is responsible for the oil spill that has affected about 500 birds in Vancouver harbor.

Heavy oil like the kind pumped from a ship's bilge was found Sunday in False Creek, said EPS officer Tom Carscadden.

"But it's such a small amount it'll be almost impossible to prove it's bilge pumping," he said.

Polanski Skips U.S. Before Sex Offence Sentencing

SANTA MONICA (AP) — Roman Polanski's lawyer told a judge today the film director has left the United States and refuses to return to court to be sentenced for a sex offence.

Polanski, 44, was to have been sentenced for unlawful sexual intercourse with a 13-year-old girl. He had been released from prison Friday after 42 days of diagnostic psychiatric tests. The release was on his own recognizance.

Superior Court Judge Laurence Rittenband immediately issued a bench warrant for Polanski's arrest and said he would give the director 10 days to surrender.

Lawyer Douglas Dalton stunned a packed courtroom when he announced: "Your honor, I received a call from Mr. Polanski this morning, advising he would not be here this morning."

The judge asked whether Dalton believed that Polanski was still in the country.

"I do not believe he is in the United States," Dalton said.

He asked the judge to allow him time to persuade the director to return for sentencing.

Sentences facing Polanski, director of such movies as Chinatown and Rosemary's Baby, range from being released on probation to a maximum of 50 years in prison.

His release from the California Men's Institute at Chino came 48 days short of the 90 days allotted for a diagnostic study.

Polanski was arrested last March and subsequently was indicted on rape, sex perversion and drug abuse charges in connection with the teenage girl.

In a plea bargain, Polanski pleaded guilty Aug. 8 to one count of unlawful sexual intercourse with a minor. Five other counts were dismissed.

He admitted he was intimate with the unidentified girl at the home of actor Jack Nicholson. Nicholson was out of town at the time.

RCMP Didn't Tell Of Letter Opening

OTTAWA (CP) — The director of security for the post office said Tuesday he did not know until October that the RCMP had been illegally opening private mail for years with the help of post office employees.

Paul Boisvert, 49, a former RCMP constable and director of post office security since November, 1970, told a federal royal commission the RCMP told him it had been opening mail a few weeks before November news reports exposed the operation.

The commission is under Justice David McDonald of the Alberta Supreme Court.

Boisvert, an RCMP constable from 1948-52, said it had been post office policy to assist the force in certain drug cases or national security by allowing them only to examine the outside of mail destined for certain addresses, not to open it.

He said the RCMP never told him in October the operation was code-named Cathedral and he had learned that only in the news reports.

"That is the first time I heard of a Cathedral operation," he told commission counsel J. F. Howard, referring to the news reports.

Howard tabled a chart showing there were 94 Cathedral operations since 1970 with 65 of them involving mail openings.

He said an investigation he began in November has still not found what postal employees were involved in the operation.

Howard tabled information indicating Boisvert's responsibilities include providing for the "security of mail, personnel, departmental values, facilities and equipment." Opening private mail is prohibited by the Post Office Act.

In November, 1976, the commission was told, Boisvert investigaged a complaint from a Hamilton, Ont., man, forwarded from the office of Postmaster-General Jean-Jacques Blais, that the police had been tampering with his mail.

The man complained that he had received a letter that had been taped shut.

Boisvert's investigation concluded the man's mail had been intercepted but that the mail had not been opened. A number of pieces of mail had been sent to Toronto, where the envelopes were photocopied by the RCMP, and were returned and delivered.

The damage had occurred elsewhere and the post office had taped the envelope shut.

Boisvert wrote to Blais Nov. 16, 1977, that the matter was an "isolated incident that was improperly handled by a postal inspector."

Boisvert said in the letter to Blais the interception was justified "in view of the national and international implications" but said his investigators were satisfied the mail never left post office custody.

METIS DISCUSS JOINING ARMY

SASKATOON — Defence Minister Barney Danson might soon be asked to form a special armed forces unit staffed by native soldiers and named after Louis Riel's lieutenant, Gabriel Dumont.

Jim Sinclair of Regina, Association of Metis and Non-status Indians of Saskatchewan president, said Tuesday such federal action might effectively reduce the high incarceration rate among the province's native people.

He said he is discussing the proposal with the association's board of directors as a possible "alternative to jails" that would have the advantages of providing job-skills training, discipline and steady incomes for native youth.

Once board approval is secured, Sinclair said he will approach Danson with his bid.

He said that in Saskatchewan, 65 per cent of the federal prison inmate population, 75 per cent of the provincial prison population and more than 90 per cent of the inmates of womens' jails are of native origin.

New Bank Act Near

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government expects to introduce a new federal Bank Act in Parliament "between now and March," Finance Minister Jean Chretien said Tuesday.

Commenting before the Commons finance committee, he added that the government hopes to have amended banking legislation passed by the end of the year.

The Bank Act, setting out the operating rules for the 11 chartered banks, is amended every 10 years. A discussion paper proposing changes was released in August, 1976, and the intention was to have new legislation passed by the time the existing decennial period expired June 30, 1977.

But the government first introduced legislation to extend the current act to Jan. 1, 1978, then in December introduced more legislation to extend the existing act until March 31, 1979.

The finance committee Tuesday completed clause-by-clause study of the bill to extend the Bank Act and approved it. The legislation now goes back to Parliament for third and final reading.

Chretien said more than 100 briefs have been received on proposed amendments to the act. But it is complex legislation, and drafting a new act is not yet completed, he added.

The 1976 discussion paper on proposed changes included plans to ease entry of foreign banks and the creation of new domestic banks. It also suggested that near-banks such as trust and mortgage loan companies, caisses populaires and credit unions, mainly regulated by the provinces, would receive equal rights with the chartered banks in a cheque clearing system.

The three shows which Kaleidoscope Theatre Company is presenting throughout B.C. school districts will be on view at The Belfry Thursday through Saturday this week at 8 p.m.

The program will consist of the Secretary of State-commissioned Mon Pays — My Country, an exploration of our French cultural heritage, devised, written and directed by Kaleidoscope artistic director Elizabeth Gorrie for secondary school students and adult audiences.

Through the eyes of Canada's earliest colonists, the shaping of a people is viewed through their environment, the land, the clergy and government. The play is interwoven with folk legends, music, stories and incidents.

Also on the evening program is the pre-school and kindergarten to Grade 2 fantasy that introduces the very young to the wonders of sea life. Salt the Seas and Pepper the Mints presents wind and wave, undersea gardens, shellfish, sea horses, starfish and legendary mermaids, sea monsters and King Neptune through the medium of imagery, sound, music and poetry.

Liz Gorrie's free adaptation of Ibšen's Peer Gynt, geared for Grades 3 to 7, will be performed at The Belfry, Saturday at 2 p.m. Using plenty of music, masks and movement, the company conjurs up reindeer rides, the Troll Palace, a shipwreck, a country wedding, the stealing of the bride and outlaw Peer's travels around the world.

Here, Just Hold This A Sec

NOGALES, Mexico — A policeman was shot and killed by an accused bank robber who had been given a gun to hold during a police photograph session, Police Chief Rafael Torres Montano says.

The slain policemman, Sgt. Inocente Sombra Castillo, 21, a three-year veteran of the force, was killed when hit in the chest with a bullet from a .22-calibre gun, Torres Montano said Tuesday.

The police chief said the gun was not believed to be loaded since one policeman pulled the trigger twice before handing it to Sixto Martinez Rojas, 18, who had been arrested shortly after a Nogales bank was robbed.

Everyone present believed the gun was unloaded and all were surprised when it went off as Martinez Rojas clicked the trigger, the chief said.

While other police officials said taking pictures of prisoners holding a gun is routine, comments from Torres Montano indicated that it is not always the case.

"I don't think an incident like this will occur again," the chief said. "There was no reason to give him the gun.

"I think they (the officers) thought it was an easy thing to do since other departments do it." There was no explanation for the practice.

Sorry, Says Marchand

OTTAWA — Liberal Senator Jean Marchand Tuesday issued a full apology to an Ottawa Crown attorney he had accused of cheating during a 1975 court case in which Marchand pleaded guilty to leaving the scene of an accident.

As a result, a libel suit against Marchand by assistant Crown attorney Andreas Berzins has been dropped.

There are other terms involved in the settlement but they have not been made public. R. K. Laishley, lawyer for Berzins said Marchand made the initial approach that resulted in the out-of-court settlement.

In a written statement, Marchand admitted making the statement to reporters June 19, 1976 and said "time and reflection has indicated to me that I may well have misinterpreted the happening of events that occurred at the provincial court."

"I wish to unequivocally retract any statements relating to being cheated by Mr. Berzins made by me," Marchand said.

"I have no desire to in any way, damage the fine reputation Mr. Berzins has in the community and within his profession and therefore extend to him my apology."

Marchand blamed bad health due to high blood pressure and what he considered "high-handed treatment by the RCMP" as the reason for his statement.

Marchand was fined $200 and had his license suspended for one year. His license was reinstated after he successfully applied to the National Parole Board.

Flash Gordon Set to Flare Into Action Once Again

Low Blow, Claims Ali

NEW YORK — In one corner, heavyweight champion of the world Muhammad Ali. In the other corner, Playgirl magazine. Ali filed a $4-million suit on Playgirl Tuesday, saying he was the victim of a low blow. Specifically, the suit cited a nude likeness of Ali by artist Tony Yamada in the February issue of the magazine and said it held Ali up to public ridicule. Although the portrait was entitled Mystery Man, Ali said it was a clear and unmistakeable likeness of him with genitals "prominently exposed."

SEATTLE — He outwitted Ming the Mereiless, filled theatres with screaming youngsters at Saturday matinees, and then captured a new crop of young fans on television in the 1950s and 1960s. Now, Flash Gordon is getting ready for a comeback.

But Clarence (Buster) Crabbe, who played Flash in 40 episodes of the science-fiction serial during the 1930s and 1940s, says that when production starts next fall for a movie remake of the series he will be playing the role of Flash's father.

"Kids will like it because kids don't change," said Crabbe, who was in Seattle recently as a special guest at the X-PO Science Fiction exposition. "If you have a good fight, some wild animals, a little fright, a little excitement, they'll go and see it just like the old days."

At the exposition, Crabbe — who will be 70 on Feb. 7 — autographed copies of his book on physical fitness for senior citizens called Energistics, a system of diet, vitamins and exercise.

Crabbe lives in Scottsdale, Ariz. He is executive director of a New Jersey swimming-pool company, for which he has worked 22 years, with occasional breaks for some cowboy movies.

"I didn't think it had a chance at the boxoffice, believe it or not," Crabbe says.

Joan Little Given Bail In New York

NEW YORK — Joan Little left a New York City jail on $51,000 bail Tuesday to wait for a decision on whether she will be returned to North Carolina to finish a prison term. In the meantime, she said, she plans to go job-hunting here.

"I've been given another chance," said Miss Little, 23, as she left the women's detention jail on Rikers Island, where she was sent after her arrest Dec. 9 in Brooklyn following an automobile chase.

Miss Little, a black, gained national attention in 1975 when she was tried and acquitted on a murder charge in the ice pick slaying of a white guard at a county jail in North Carolina.

Everyday goodness.

He Escaped the Mau-Mau To Find a Laugh on Stage

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

There aren't many men around who've brushed shoulders with the likes of the Mau-Mau, the Ghurkas and Jonathan Winters.

But Barrie Baldaro is one.

He used to be a soldier with the British army. Now he's a comedian. In fact he's regarded as Canada's top comedy character actor.

The transition may appear strange but it isn't once you've met this portly Englishman with his mirthful eyes and ready wit.

"I was a lousy soldier," he admits.

Baldaro arrived in Victoria two weeks ago and since then has been working eight-hours a day, six days a week, rehearsing for a role in the Bastion Theatre Company's production of The Comedians which starts Friday at the McPherson Playhouse. He's sharing top billing with Roland Hewgill, whom Baldaro says is the best actor in Canada.

Although Baldaro has been in Canada since the mid-50s, this is only his second visit to the city. He was here last in 1967, doing a stand-up comic routine, sponsored by the British Travel Association.

Then, he remembers, Victoria was a sleepy, comfortable, midddle-class town. This visit he sees Victoria as a sleepy, comfortable, middle-class town. Things don't change much on the west coast.

This is the first time he's performed in the Comedians, a play he describes as a savage, vulgar — "raunchy would be putting it mildly" — satire.

Baldaro plays the part of a Jewish tavern keeper named Sammy Samuel who aspires to be a big time comic.

Baldaro fits into the role nicely since Sammy and he have a lot in common. Baldaro too aspires to see his name in lights on the marquees of London's West End and New York's Broadway.

Brought up as a good Catholic boy, he attended the prestigious Oratory School run by the Oratorian Monks in Birmingham, then went on to university, got a degree in animal science and in 1952 joined the veterinary corps of the British Army. He became a specialist in the training of war dogs, a skill that took him to Korea, Malaya and Kenya.

In 1957 he left the army and came to Canada where he found a job as a biologist on a cancer project jointly supported by the Ontario Cancer Institute and University of Toronto.

Three years passed and he yearned for a change.

He'd always been interested in theatre — he'd written a few shows in his army days — and most of his friends in Toronto were composers, writers and actors. In 1960 he and a small group of friends banded together to open a coffee house, the Bohemian Embassy. He wrote humorous short stories and read them aloud for $5 a crack.

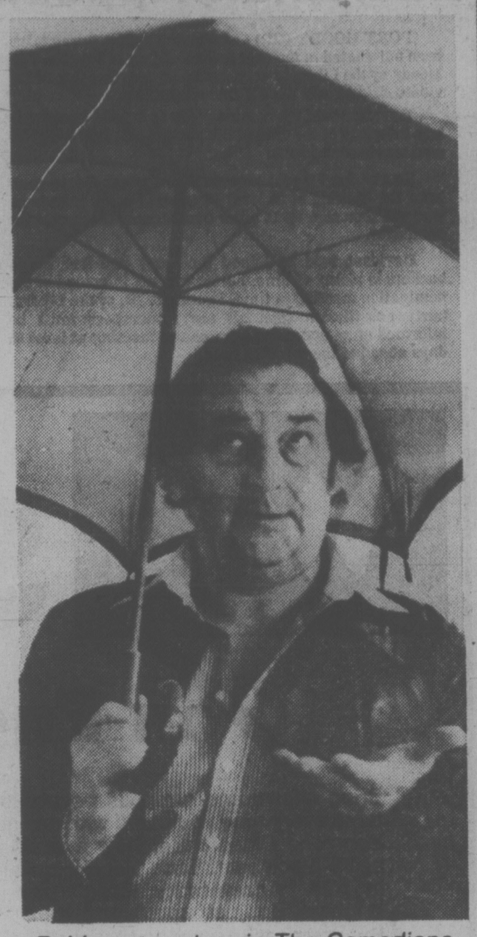

The stories gradually evolved into comic monologues and one day, bored by the tedious, pretentious outpourings of the resident house poets, Baldaro suggested the group put on a revue, a satirical look at contemporary events. The revue became a smash hit in Toronto and in 1962 he decided to go professional.

Ironically, although he appeared as the drunken chef in Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz, a part written into the movie by his friend Mordecai Richler, most of his film work has been in French Canadian productions.

Baldaro says one of the highest professional honors he's received was being selected in 1974, along with comedian Peter Cullen, to represent Canada in an elaborate NBC television special, Wacky World of Comedy, produced by former Laugh-In producer George Schlatter.

Over the years Baldaro has worked with virtually every major comedian in North America including Jonathan Winters and Paul Lynd.

However he identifies more with English comics, probably Tony Hancock more than any other.

Spy Charges Denied

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Vietnamese student whose father once ran for president of South Vietnam on a peace platform and a U.S. state department information officer say they are not guilty of charges that they passed U.S. defence secrets to Vietnam.

Ronald Louis Humphrey and Truong Dinh Hung are accused in a seven-count federal indictment of transmitting documents to Hanoi "relating to the national defence of the United States."

The indictment, released Tuesday, accuses Humphrey of passing secret documents to Truong for relay couriers who carried the documents to Vietnamese officials in Paris.

The espionage arrests are believed to be the first in which a U.S. citizen has been accused of spying for Vietnam and the first since South Vietnam was taken over by the North in 1975.

Both men maintained their innocence in initial appearances Tuesday at the U.S. District Court in Alexandria, Va., a Washington suburb. They were to return to the courthouse today to enter formal pleas.

Judge William Bryant ordered them held in lieu of $250,000 bail. Truong's lawyer argued for lower bail, but the prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney Frank Dunham, urged they be held without bail.

Radioman Appeals

PORT MOODY (CP) — Lawyer Thomas Spraggs has been nominated in the new federal riding of Mission-Port Moody by the Liberal party, but radio sportscaster Al Davidson said he will appeal the nomination.

Davidson said the nomination was invalid because he was informed of the date of the meeting too late to file his own nomination forms.

To run for Liberal nomination, the candidate must have the backing of at least 16 Liberal party members, who will then sign up 16 other constituents to support the candidate.

Davidson said he joined the party and had his 16 backers in plenty of time, but he was not informed of the nomination meeting in time. Section 7, 4B, of the Liberal party constitution says all party members must be informed of an upcoming nomination meeting at least 45 days ahead of the meeting date.

Vancouver To Chicago

VANCOUVER (CP) — United Airlines will inaugurate Vancouver-Chicago nonstop service on Saturday, March 18, it was announced Tuesday.

Manager Glen Wolfe said United will begin service utilizing Boeing-727 tri-jet aircraft, providing 96 seats daily in each direction.

United filed application for the non-stop authority following bilateral agreements reached between Canada and the United States in 1973 which allowed a United States carrier to fly the route.

Students to Buy Brain Pacemaker

BURNABY (CP) — Thanks to the fund-raising efforts of fellow Simon Fraser University students, cerebral palsy victim Terry Miller will have an operation this spring to implant a brain pacemaker that could improve his muscular co-ordination.

Students have raised about $6,000 since September to cover the costs of the $3,500 brain pacer, three trips to a hospital in Ottawa and physiotherapy. Hospital and doctor fees should be covered by Miller's British Columbia medical insurance.

"We're all ecstatic about reaching the goal so quickly, especially Terry," said Dennis Ducklow, a SFU student involved in the fund-raising committee.

Miller, 29, said in a written statement Monday: "The willingness of the community to lend a helping hand has been of incalculable assistance in my academic endeavors."

Miller, who lives in an SFU residence, is unable to eat, dress or bathe himself. He suffers from impaired speech. Other students help him move around.

Ducklow said tests completed show promise that Miller could respond to a brain pacer.

COFFEE SALES NOT SO PERKY

BOCA RATON, Fla. (Reuter) — Although coffee prices are coming down from record highs reached a year ago, Canadians and Americans are still drinking less of the brew and are expected to do so for some time to come.

This was the consensus of industry leaders attending the conference of the National Coffee Association of U.S.A. who were surveyed today by Reuters news agency.

In place of coffee, they said, North Americans seem to have switched to tea, cocoa and soft drinks.

A Midwestern retailer and a New York state roaster both agreed that coffee consumption is 25 per cent below its pre-1977 level. A year ago consumer advocates were calling for a boycott of coffee as prices soared. Some consumer advocates thought they detected price manipulation by South American coffee growers in the price rise.

Most coffee industry experts here expect that consumption levels will rise gradually as prices continue to fall, at least in the immediate future, but some delegates to the conference expressed doubt that Americans will ever return to earlier levels of consumption.

"If retail prices get under $3 a pound and stay there, consumption will strengthen," one delegate said. "But who would have ever thought $3 would be considered a bargain?"

Industry sources say caffein addicts have not stopped drinking coffee altogether. Rather, they are drinking less—and perhaps enjoying it less.

They noted that many Americans evidently are drinking fewer cups a day and that some restaurants and other institutions are putting less coffee in the pot. Also, they said, some shoppers are buying smaller packages of coffee, resulting in a net reduction of use since supplies run out more often and some people hesitate before replenishing them.

With green coffee beans now selling for about $2 a pound, estimates of future prices range from $1 a pound to $1.50 a pound. A Quebec dealer predicted that consumption will return to normal by mid-year.

22-Year Plan to Make Sahel Bloom

DAKAR, Senegal (AP) — Africa's drought-stricken sub-Sahara region has begun a 22-year agricultural project with U.S. help to overcome cycles of devastating famines that afflict its 27 million people.

Eight countries making up the region known as the Sahel, sandwiched between the Sahara to the north and the jungles of central Africa, plan to harness their rivers and move water into parched fields to end the region's reliance on rainfall and its treacherous fluctuations.

The project will cost an estimated $10 billion by the year 2000 and is being financed and advised by the United States and Western Europe. If carried out as planned, it could change decades-old farming habits.

"Our argument is that to do nothing is even more costly," said Roy Stacy, an American economist with the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development's Sahel Club.

This year's drought—the second in less than five years caused by a dramatic drop in rainfall—has left farmlands parched and barren. Gambian officials reported last fall that rainfall was only one-fifth of the 1976 total and 60 per cent of the early crops had been lost.

Current estimates are that at least 500,000 tons of emergency foreign grain, at a cost of about $200 a ton, are needed for the 3,000-mile-long Sahel strip to head off widespread hunger.

"It'll probably end up costing several hundred million dollars by the time we're finished," Stacy said. "And it would have to go on every few years through the end of the century if nothing were done."

With a permanent solution as their goal, envoys from the eight Sahel countries—Senegal, Cape Verde Islands, Chad, Gambia, Mali, Mauritania, Niger and Upper Volta—gathered here in March, 1976, with donor countries and UN agencies to form the Sahel Club.

The Paris-based club is co-ordinating foreign aid shipments for the current drought. Western governments so far have pledged 243,000 tons of food.

To end its dependence on foreign aid during drought periods, the club's plan to make the Sahel region self-sufficient in food focuses on exploiting water resources to increase irrigation.

Only about 195,000 acres, or one per cent of the crops, are fully irrigated in the Sahel strip and the rest of the region's food comes from costly imports or dry farming. The club's plan calls for increasing the number of irrigated acres and diverting water from rivers.

Reforestation of depleted woodlands is also planned. Villagers have stripped trees and bushes for firewood.

February Signs of Spring

Feburary is likely to disclose many signs not only of growth but of early flowers that truly belong to spring. Growth buds have been plentiful during January but now gardeners will find flower buds and open blossoms increasing in numbers.

Apart from flower buds on rhododendrons and camellias whose buds are initiated in the previous fall, deciduous shrubs and trees are showing actin long before leaf appearance.

Branches of double flowered ornamental plum, or cherry, Prunus blireiana, which are near a sunny building wall will have been taking advantage of reflected warmth. Any day now should see many of the fat pinkish buds opening.

At ground level where sun dwells and wind is screened by shrub growth nearby there will be winter crocuses opening in sunshine and perhaps already attracting an adventurous honey bee. Snowdrops, aconites and sweet violets add their color and faint sweet perfume, while the crowns of Saxifraga or Megasea with the large persistent leaves is erupting into clusters of lovely pink blossoms.

Furry grey "pussies" on young willow shoots have appeared in wayside ditches and on wet-spot garden willows. It seems that we amateurs need a botanist to identify willows, for even locally we notice differences in leaf shape, size and coloring. Specimens taken (while in perfect condition) to the Provincial Museum botanist would solve our difficulties. Meanwhile, we enjoy these childhood signs of spring.

Slowly the flower bud heads on pacific Dogwood (Cornus nuttalli) are swelling, but are in no hurry; foliage must expand before flowers will be seen. Swelling tips on twigs of Chinese Dogwood (Cornus kousa) also appear promising but no real action is expected until late April.

Among the earliest showy flowering shrubs are Flowering Quince(Chaenomeles japonica). There must be a dozen or so varieties common in gardens here, but their naming has become confused. Again, only a botanist or an experienced nurseryman who has grown them all, would be able to sort them out by name.

One of the earliest to bloom is now crowded with clusters of flower buds on two-year-old wood. Warm-sheltered but sunny gardens may have some already open. The color is usually bright orange or a dark red, each open flower being about an inch diameter. There are white and pink named varieties but they are later to open. The flowers, and later the quince fruits, form on well-ripened woody twigs, so that pruning must allow for a certain amount of new wood each year. These shrubs will grow in the open away from walls, but their rigid habit ad thorny stems demand careful placing and pruning. Fruits are well worth having in fall to combine with sweet apples.

An unusually long season of bloom extending into May recommends this Flowering Quince as one of the most useful of shrubs for the small home garden.

The plants dealt with today are some that belong essentially to the spring garden and to be considered distinct from those of winter which have already been discussed. With Easter early this year, are we looking forward to an early spring, or are we only precocious in our thinking?

Lib Mags Hit Japan

"One of the purposes of Feminist is to introduce women's studies and cultivate Japanese cultures of the past," said founder and editor Ikuko Atsumi, a poet and lecturer at Aoyama Gakuin University.

"A book like de Beauvoir's Second Sex should have been written in Japan. We should learn what elements we have that made this kind of male-dominated society.

"The more women students study, the more they strengthen male society. I was a student of English literature, studied Shakespeare, Tennyson and wrote my thesis on Dylan Thomas. But I learned nothing about how to live as a woman."

I Am Woman, another publication subtitled Magazine for New Women, is in its fifth issue, with a circulation of 70,000 and a staff of six. A mildly feminist magazine, it brings out some of the complaints and dilemmas of women in articles such as New Meaning of Female Friends, How to be Independent and New Women's Universities.

"Magazines up to now have not treated women seriously," said editor Shinji Ishii. "Now they are facing the consequences as the fashion magazines pick up more readers and television takes over the scandals."

He said women's liberation is weak in Japan, making it impossible to have a straight lib magazine.

Ms. Atsumi said the women's movement in Japan has become more scholarly and intellectual.

"Still, we are five years behind American feminists. In 1972 Ms. began and other traditional magazines changed in the United States. Such changes are just starting in Japan."

Most magazines in Japan are edited by men, she said, and don't try to deal with women's fundamental problems.

"They continue with the same kind of complaining, confessions and sentimental articles. The attitude is not helpful to women—it's a kind of catharsis. Women want something to console them, to hear that other people are suffering from the same experiences.

"They must open their eyes to change, not only in Japan, but in other countries in the world. We must look at Japan from the outside. Otherwise, women are just looking after their own happiness, their own family."

Fewer Jews Predicted

NEW YORK (AP) — If current birth rates and marital and social trends continue, in less than 75 years there will be only two-thirds as many Jews in the United States as there are now, a sociologist says.

Dr. Steven Cohen told the Conference on Jewish Population this week that U.S. Jews are in "negative population growth" because of a low birth rate, a high number of intermarriages and the "assimilation of Jews into the American ethic."

If the current declining birth rate continues, Cohen told the group of rabbis and social workers, the U.S. Jewish population, now about six million persons, will decline to four million by the year 2050.

Cohen, a professor at Queens College, heads the Task Force on Jewish Population of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies. He cited "gloomy" demographic data which he said was compiled from "several surveys over the past few years." They show a birth rate of 1.6 children per family among Jews and 2.1 children among non-Jews.

Jews who marry non-Jews and those who are assimilated into the U.S. culture are not as likely to become involved in Jewish affairs, Cohen said.

New sign posted by the highways department reminds northbound travellers on Patricia Bay Highway near McKenzie roadspeeds are no longer governed by miles per hour. Joining the 11 Canadian vessels will be ships from Britain, the United States, Japan, South Korea and New Zealand.

The number may increase to 30 if vessels from six other countries which have been invited are able to participate.

Cut-Rate Canada Travel Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — Government and industry tourism officials moved Tuesday to promote more travel by Canadians at home through a package of new low-cost tours.

The program, which involves the country's two major airlines, Air Canada and CP Air, as well as railways, hotel chains and travel agents, was announced following a one-day federal-provincial tourism ministers' meeting.

The ministers agreed at a news conference after the meeting that the program, which includes 54 tours, will not wipe out the Canada's estimated $1.7 billion 1977 travel deficit but will attract more Canadians to vacations within the country.

Industry officials said it is difficult at this point to put any dollar value on the plan.

The over-all program is to be promoted by extensive advertising in the coming weeks, industry officials said.

Among the programs are:

—Air-tour packages offered by CP Air and CP Hotels which combine domestic charter class air fares with accommodations and tour facilities priced at 30 to 40 per cent below normal.

—Train, bus and cruise tours promoted by government-owned VIA Rail Canada. The company is offering 12 tours, with at least one in every province.

—Air Canada will offer travel plans allowing tourists to rent apartments in some cities.

A discussion paper presented earlier in the day to the ministers cited rapid advances in Canadian wage and price costs as major factors in the increase of the travel deficit.

Between 1961 and 1975, Canada had a surplus on its travel account with the U.S., the paper said. But between 1973 and 1976, Canadian average hourly earnings in the hotel, restaurant and tavern business rose by 53 per cent compared with 23 to 26 per cent in the U.S.

Devaluation of the dollar last year had partially corrected that but wage costs were still 20 per cent higher in Canada, the study said.

The result by 1975 was a reversal of the surplus on travel account with the U.S. by last year, the deficit with the U.S. had reached $800 million.

Horner said the ministers agreed that governments should "review policies on wage rates in the hospitality industry."

He cited in particular the payment of premium wage rates to employees who work on statutory holidays. Some employees receive two-and-a-half times regular pay and Horner said the practice should be re-examined.

BEER PRICE HIKED

The cost of drinking beer went up eight per cent today for fans of the bottled variety and 13.2 per cent for those who prefer draught.

Beer by the case now is $1.64, up 29 cents from $1.35. The price includes the 60-cent deposit for the bottles.

Later this week, beer by the glass will go as high as 50 cents, up from a range of 35 cents to 45 cents.

Bottled beer in pubs is expected to rise to at least a dollar.

The increases are due to a price hike by breweries which has been approved by the provincial Liquor Distribution Branch.

Lloyd Manuel, manager of the B.C. Hotels Association, said members will be encouraged to pass the increases through at the retail level and not try to absorb the costs. An official announcement of the new price structure is expected Thursday.

In Victoria, Gordon Card, manager of the Colony Motor Inn, said he expects he will have to increase his price for draught beer to 50 cents a glass from 45 cents.

Bottled beer, he said, likely would go to one dollar from 95 cents.

"We can't afford to absorb cost increases with labor costs rising the way they are. We are into a new contract period in June."

Card said the tipping structure might be altered temporarily with beer prices going to even amounts at 50 cents and one dollar.

"However it will all even out. There will no longer be a dime change from a dollar for two glasses of beer but on the other hand some customers tell the waiter to have a beer himself and now this tip will be 50 cents instead of 45 cents."

Card said some hotel managers would prefer to see a floating price for beer instead of strict controls.

Kingsview Bankrupt In Duncan

A 1,200-lot subdivision project near Duncan has been abandoned by Kingsview Properties Ltd. of Vancouver, leaving $650,000 owed to a number of contractors.

The Mount Tzouhalem project on Maple Bay Road southeast of the city was to include apartments and townhouses as well as the 1,200 single-family homes.

Liens have been filed by Wilson Contracting Ltd. and Chew Excavating Ltd. of Victoria as well as by Discovery Land Service Ltd. of Duncan.

Work began a year ago on installing services in the area.

Democracy's Cost

OTTAWA — Tory MP Bill Clarke, an accountant, has estimated that democracy costs each and every Canadian citizen about $3.77 per year, not including the cost of elections or tax credits for political contributions. See story on Page 33.

OTTAWA FAVORS ONTARIO

Steel Beam Levy Hitting B.C. Firms

A political storm is brewing over a new federal import duty on steel beams that MPs say favors Ontario industry, especially Algoma Steel Corp. Ltd., at the expense of British Columbia industry and jobs.

The chief vocal opponent of the duty in Parliament has been Ron Huntington (PC—Capilano) who said Tuesday the duty will mean economic disaster for B.C. and underlines "a lack of regional brokerage in the political system."

Huntington said his Conservative colleagues representing Ontario constituencies, wish he would shut up because they have steel and related industry and jobs to protect.

The 30-per-cent duty, on top of a previous 10-per-cent import charge, applies to wide flange steel beams used in heavy construction such as office buildings, industrial plants and bridges. Main exporters to Canada are Britain, France, Japan, South Africa and Luxembourg.

The western MPs say they are angry because B.C. consumers have to pay the duty despite the province never having been a significant market for Algoma, based in Sault Ste. Marie. Algoma is the only Canadian producer of wide flange steel.

Cyril Symes (NDP—Sault Ste. Marie) said in an interview exempting B.C. "might be a compromise solution."

But Symes did not want the government to lose sight of the fact the decision was made because foreigners are dumping the product on the Canadian market at prices so low Algoma cannot compete. This jeopardized Ontario jobs.

The B.C. MPs, the provincial government, industry and union spokesmen, who fear the loss of at least 2,000 jobs because of the duty, say Algoma has traditionally been unable to meet B.C. demand for the beams.

Dominion Bridge, one of Algoma's former subsidiaries in B.C., used to import steel products from Japan too, before it closed a year or two ago.

POST OFFICE STRIKERS BACK

Canadian Press

Postal maintenance workers in Toronto, London, Ont., and Laval, Que., returned to work today after a one-day strike. But all 13 maintenance workers at the main post office in downtown Montreal called in sick.

One union official in Toronto said that although most maintenance workers were on the job today, rotating strikes to protest delays in reaching a new contract with the federal treasury board might spread to smaller centres.

The 1,100 maintentance workers in the country, members of the general labor and trades branch of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, maintain and service automatic mail-sorting equipment and post office vehicles. They have been without a contract for a year.

In Ottawa, Postmaster-General Jean-Jacques Blais said he supports the treasury board's position in the dispute.

Pen Siege Drags On

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Negotiations for the surrender of five prisoners and their 10 hostages at the British Columbia penitentiary continue without the lawyer who has been representing the hostage-takers.

Lawyer Marguerite Jackson said Tuesday night she had been prevented by RCMP negotiators from seeing her clients and will be denied access until the prisoners have surrendered.

RCMP Insp. Les Holmes said Ms. Jackson would not be involved in a meeting that was to be held today between three prisoners and RCMP negotiators.

RCMP Supt. Bruce Northorp and RCMP S. Sgt. Chuck Hutchinson met with prisoners Ralph Saumer and David Bennett Tuesday night, shortly before Ms. Jackson said she had been denied access to her clients since arriving at the prison Tuesday morning.

"I spoke to S. Sgt. Hutchinson who advised me that the RCMP were not prepared to let me speak to my clients again and that this position would continue until the arrest and surrender of all hostages and hostage-takers. No reason was given for the position."

Ms. Jackson said Bennett asked her Saturday to represent him, Saumer, convicted murderer Andy Bruce, Richard Wright and Steven Albert Hall. The request came shortly after they had seized 13 hostages in an aborted breakout from the maximum-security prison.

Three women hostages have since been released, leaving two male prisoners, one male visitor and seven female visitors held in the visitors' area of the 100-year-old institution.

Northorp confirmed speculation Tuesday that the five hostage-takers and some of their hostages had been involved in a conspiracy to stage an escape, which was

Tel Talks Nearly Scuttled

Negotiations aimed at ending the B.C. Telephone Co. dispute were almost disrupted Tuesday when six Telecommunications Workers Union pickets followed two company supervisors to a downtown Vancouver hotel where talks were being held.

The report of industrial inquiry commissioner Justice Henry Hutcheon of the B.C. Supreme Court has provided the basis for negotiating sessions which include federal mediator Mike Collins.

Justice Hutcheon made specific recommendations for the first two years of the contract but made only suggestions for the third in his report.

Meanwhile, in Victoria union officials turned down a request to allow supervisors to instal additional phones and equipment in Memorial Arena for the Canadian figure skating championships which began today.

Jack Sambrooke, president of the TWU's Victoria local, said such requests are granted only in emergencies or in instances of very special need.

He said the union considers the additional equipment not absolutely necessary for the staging of the championships.

ICBC Boss Definite: McGeer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Education Minister Pat McGeer said Tuesday a United States citizen hired as president of the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia will start work in March, despite complaints from immigration officials McGeer that has yet to prove a Canadian could not fill the position.

McGeer declined comment about a statement that he failed to supply immigration authorities with information about the search for an executive to head ICBC.

Ian Thompson, director-general of the B.C.-Yukon area of the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission, said McGeer has not supplied immigration authorities with details of the search.

However, McGeer said Robbie Sherrell, the American hired, at a salary of $80,000 a year to head ICBC, will start work March 1.

Sherrell, executive director for Europe of the Hartford Insurance group, is an American who makes his home in Pulborough, England.

Immigration authorities have the right to veto working clearance for Sherrell if they are not satisfied that a Canadian citizen could not handle the job.

Last March, the city of Prince George advertised for a building inspector for 14 months throughout Canada but found no suitable applicant. The city hired Sid Jones, a British citizen, who arrived in Prince George to take up his post but was then refused clearance to work by Canada Manpower.

Manpower said the city should have listed the vacancy with its professional services instead of hiring outside the country.

Ottawa Plans to Offer 60,000 Student Jobs

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — A $96.2-million program to create an estimated 60,000 summer jobs for students in federal departments across Canada and to place more than 250,000 students in positions in the private sector was announced today by Bud Cullen, federal minister of employment and immigration.

The summer youth employment program will offer job opportunities in various government fields, such as tourism in national parks, wildlife management and healthcare organizations.

Canada Employment and Immigration Commission will co-ordinate the activities of the 10 federal departments participating in the program.

As in the past, the commission also will operate about 300 Canada Manpower centres to help place students in jobs in the private and public sector.

Meanwhile, Statistics Canada reported Thursday that the number of available jobs in the final three months of 1977 averaged 36,700, down 30 per cent from the figure for the third quarter of last year.

The job vacancy average was also nine per-cent lower than in the final quarter of 1976.

In December, there were 882,000 unemployed persons across the country.

Nationally, there were only four vacancies for every 1,000 existing jobs in the fourth quarter of 1977, Statistics Canada said. That compared with six in the third quarter and five a year earlier.

In British Columbia the vacancy rate was vinces, with comparable figfour per 1,000 compared to three a year ago.

ANOTHER 'HOT' SCRAP FOUND

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Another radioactive segment from a downed Soviet nuclear-powered satellite has been found on lake ice in Great Slave Lake, it was announced here today.

The radioactive segment was found near two segments of the satellite—one of them radioactive and the other not—recovered Tuesday.

Major Barry Frewer, Canadian Forces information officer, said officials of the Atomic Energy Control Board (AECL) and nuclear-response team members were to leave here today aboard two Canadian Forces Twin-Otter aircraft to attempt to recover the second radioactive object.

The two segments found Tuesday—now held in this territorial capital—were about 24 kilometres northwest of Fort Reliance. The second radioactive object was found about three kilometres east of the earlier segments.

Meanwhile, a Canadian Forces C-130 Hercules transport aircraft was scheduled to arrive here today to take the two objects found Tuesday back to CFB Namao near Edmonton, headquarters for the search operation.

The two segments will be placed in lead casings aboard the aircraft. After they are taken to Namao, they may be sent to the AECL laboratory at Chalk River, Ont.

Fox Kept Mum About Forgery

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Francis Fox passed an RCMP security check and entered cabinet as solicitor-general 16 months ago without telling police or Prime Minister Trudeau that he once forged a name on a hospital document to help a lover get an abortion.

Trudeau told the Commons Tuesday he always asks the national police force to screen potential candidates for high office, asking them to produce any files or allegations that might affect the appointment.

"This procedure was followed in the case of Mr. Fox," Trudeau said.

Trudeau said he learned Jan. 18, in a letter from a private citizen passed on by his principal secretary James Coutts, that Fox had signed the name of his lover's husband on a hospital admitting document to help the woman get an abortion.

Fox, Trudeau said, considered his actions "purely private matters, personal matters, and he did not feel that the implications were such that he should not join the cabinet."

The Quebec Bar Association, meanwhile, will not say if any investigation is planned into the Fox case.

No Hero, Says Druggist

Pharmacist Henry Heggelund who wrestled a gunman to the floor and held him for police Tuesday night says he's no hero.

Heggelund said a man who appeared to be under the influence of drugs or liquor had been hanging about for some 20 minutes.

When the store was about to close at 9.30 p.m., the man pulled a gun.

But Heggelund wrenched it out of his hand, wrestled the man down and knelt on him while police were called.

"I wouldn't have done this if it wasn't obvious I could get the gun. There was no danger involved," Heggelund insisted.

Police arrested a 32-year-old Duncan man and charged him with attempted armed robbery and possession of stolen property.

They said the gun was a .22 calibre starting pistol.

"He (the bandit) asked what I would think if he had come in to robe the store and what would I say if he had a gun under his belt," Heggelund said today.

"I said I didn't think it would be very good and he started to pull the gun out of his belt. I wrenched it out of his hand and got him on the floor."

Heggelund said the man's reactions were not very good.

"If he had pulled the gun at some distance and pointed it at me I wouldn't have tried to get it."

How About Big 10-4s On This One?

My Good Buddies on the Malahat are in trouble again.

Those guys who spend much of their summer up there helping out and making sure that you, the motorist, enjoy yours, are broadcasting another S O S — this time, for themselves.

I'm talking about the Malahat Safety Patrol, a community service that has been performed by members of the Juan de Fuca Citizens Band (CB) Radio Club for the last seven years. You may recall that last spring I wrote a little piece on the club and its fear that, because of rising costs, the patrol might die after the summer.

Well, it hasn't died yet and, in fact, the club has a new man at the helm — someone who is not only a new member but the new president — who is already shouting that the patrol will keep going "come hell or high water".

That's the sort of attitude the Juan de Fuca CBers need right now but even Rae Martin, who has taken over the reins from Roy Batstone, admits the club must have more members. A whole lot more.

The club patrols the Malahat between Goldstream and Bamberton continuously each Friday evening and again Sunday afternoon and evening on summer weekends, looking for and reporting trouble on the accident-plagued stretch of highway.

Its members stop and give what assistance they can to stranded motorists, B.C. resident and tourist alike. And in the event of an accident, the CBers render first aid and take charge of traffic control until the police arrive. It's a fine community service and one for which the Colwood RCMP has nothing but praise.

But it's all done on a strictly volunteer basis which means, of course, those countless trips back and forth over the Malahat come out of the club's meagre coffers or the members' pockets. They were sure last summer's Malahat Patrol would be the last.

At the club's annual meeting, few people were around.

"Three guys handed in their resignations right there," says Martin. "There were barely enough to form a quorum; and they asked me if I'd run for president, so I said sure."

Though he'll be 65 in July, the livewire manager of a Victoria highrise apartment building is providing the club with a much-needed burst of enthusiasm. He talked those three would-be dropouts into staying on, ringed his wife Pauline in as treasurer, and has since built the member ship up from 11 to 18.

But that, he knows, is far from the number needed to keep the patrol running.

"We could do with anywhere from 50 to 100 members," says Rae, who points out the club once had 100 members in its early days.

"We're having a display and membership drive in the Hillside Mall on March 9, 10 and 11," he adds.

In a world where most people seem to think of themselves rather than of others, the unselfish attitude of those in this club is refreshing and, I feel, deserves support. So, if you're a CB nut and just might have some time on your hands on the occasional weekend this summer, why not get in there? You could do a lot worse with your time.

As far as Martin is concerned, the club has nowhere to go but up. He's had new larger signs made for the cars, plans to extend the runs to include Saturdays and says whether it's his turn or not, he'll be up there "making sure the boys are doing a good job."

"We're working closely with the Colwood RCMP and are going to make an even better job," he says. "Most of the members who will be on the 'Hat will be taking a safe-driving course. We're going to have first class members up there — not a bunch of CB kids horsing around."

And ask Rae Martin if there is still a chance the patrol will be scrapped and he gives a wide smile.

"No way! It will keep going . . . even if my wife and I have to make all the runs alone."

C. Saanich Targeted By Unions

The Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council is zeroing in on Central Saanich in its running battle against construction being done by non-union workers.

About 16 construction union workers demonstrated Tuesday outside Central Saanich's municipal hall to protest the use of non-union sub-contractors on a police station-firehall addition.

The council's position is that the municipality should not hire non-union people at less than union rates when 40 per cent of Vancouver Island's contruction workers are unemployed.

Ted Bowers, executive director of Olco Management Ltd., the company handling the Central Saanich project, said the municipality's position in putting the project out to tender was that it should be open to union and non-union contractors.

"The reasoning was that there are both union and non-union taxpayers," Bowers said.

He said it is his understanding that Wergeland Construction, the firm doing the initial structural work, is now employing three men and paying them union wages.

He said Wergeland told him that the key people working on the project would be union.

John Schibli, secretary of the trades council, said meetings were held with Wergeland before the contract was awarded asking if the company would be willing to agree to collective agreements with the workers on the site.

He said the contractor said he couldn't afford such agreements on this particular job leading Schibli to believe that union wages and benefits are not being paid.

Schibli said in good times companies like Wergeland don't bid on projects like the $375,000 Central Saanich job and the work goes to established firms. But now that times are tough, contractors are getting work where they can.

Ted Kurvers, spokesman for Wergeland, said there are three workers on the site now, one of them union and two non-union. All three get union wages. However, he said, they don't get all union benefits such as dental plans.

He said Wergeland hires union or non-union workers depending on the stipulations in the specific project.

Kurvers said it costs about $1.50 an hour less to employ a non-union worker and therefore when his company bids on a non-union project the price is about 10 per cent lower than if all union employees were used.

Walkway

A 300-foot pedestrian walkway will be built over the Trans-Canada Highway at Portage Road as part of the highway widening project.

Tenders to erect the overpass 3.2 miles west of Douglas Street will be called Feb. 21, Esquimalt Socred MLA Lyle Kahl said Tuesday.

City Joins Campaign To Delay New Hospital

Construction on the proposed new Helmcken Road hospital will be delayed two months and the regional hospital and health planning commission stripped of its decision-making authority if city council's planning committee gets its way.

In a strongly-worded motion by Mayor Mike Young at a meeting Tuesday, the committee agreed to recommend to city council that a start on the Helmcken project be set back to April.

The planning committee's recommendations likely will be endorsed by council at the next full meeting, a week Thursday, and Victoria will become the fourth municipality to support a delay in the Helmcken project.

At the urging of the Victoria Medical Society, Esquimalt, Saanich and Oak Bay councils have already agreed to ask the provincial government for a delay.

The city committee's decision came after it heard a presentation by VMS president Dr. J.D. Critchley whose association is strongly opposed to the Helmcken proposal.

The planning committee will also tell council the hospital care needs of the western community — which is to be served by the proposed new hospital — should be reassessed, and that in the future the hospital and health planning commission should not have the power to make decisions on the matter.

Committee chairman Ald. Bob Wright and Mayor Young attacked the hospital and health planning commission for what Wright termed "empire-building in the worst way."

Wright said that only four of the hospital commission's 14 members are politicians and he found it totally unacceptable that a non-political board is making decisions on matters of extreme importance to the community.

Only Ald. Larry Ryan spoke against Mayor Young's motion, saying that "I have more confidence in the (hospital and health) planning commission that in some politicians. I think the politicians have confused this issue immensely."

Although Critchley has won the support of Victoria's planning committee, he didn't do it without butting heads with one of the members.

Wright suggested that a small hospital of perhaps 169 beds would be advisable to meet health care needs in the growing region.

Critchley said the VMS would have strong objections to that proposal because small hospitals don't provide the best care, and it would be better to bring patients an extra few miles for treatment at either Victoria General or Royal Jubilee.

"I think you're trying to offer them something as a political expedient to keep them happy," said Critchley.

After a somewhat heated exchange over that point Wright calmed matters by saying that "I think that we're on the same side of the fence although we appear to be on opposite sides sometimes . . . let's fight for what we believe in."

75 Jobs Change Hands As School Staff Laid Off

The Greater Victoria School District laid off 39 employees Tuesday as part of its plan to scrap jobs the district says are redundant because of declining enrolment.

The school board announced last September its intention to chop 57 positions by the middle of 1978 and the move was opposed vigorously by the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

CUPE Local 382, representing outside workers, and Local 947, representing inside workers, eventually reached an agreement that the board would have to follow union-wide seniority procedures in laying off the employees.

In Local 382, as a result of the "bumping" effect of a senior worker taking the job of an employee with less seniority, 31 people were laid off and 75 jobs changed hands.

In Local 947, 11 positions were eliminated but only eight people laid off as the board decided to keep two of the jobs and one employee found another job.

Tom Cooper, president of Local 382, said a lot of people took "healthy cuts in pay" as a result of the shuffling.

He said once the seniority issue was resolved, the layoffs went fairly smoothly but there will be several grievances submitted. They will be arbitrated by a Labor Relations Board panel.

Five apprentices who were laid off were possibly the hardest hit by the move, Cooper said, as most of them have only one year left in their four-year apprenticeship. If they can't find another employer soon they may have to repeat one year, he added.

CUPE has asked the school board to rehire the apprentices.

6% Hike

Greater Victoria substitute teachers will only get a wage increase of six per cent — the Anti-Inflation Board limit, trustees said at a budget meeting this week.

The subs will not receive the 32 per cent increase awarded by an arbitration panel in December.

Snow Tonight For Peninsula

Snow fell Tuesday night on Saanich Peninsula and there will be a repeat tonight as temperatures hover around zero.

Most of Greater Victoria had rain which continued today but the weather office reported two centimetres of snow at the airport overnight, and about 3 cm. on higher ground in Central and North Saanich where some residents said there was as much as two inches.

Intermittent light rain mixed with snow is forecast for Thursday with lows in the range of —2 to 0 and highs between 2 and 4 degrees.

Flower Count Central All Ready

A running total of flowers blooming outdoors in the Victoria area will be registered daily in Eaton's window.

The count is being registered at the three local radio stations because phones could not be installed at Flower Count Central, due to the B.C. Tel labor dispute.

Victoria's flower totals will also be posted daily in Calgary and Edmonton and 30 Victorians will leave on a daffodil blitz of the two centres starting Monday.

The group will stop in Kelowna for a brief promotion effort before continuing to Calgary, arriving in Edmonton Wednesday.

Flowermometers will be erected in both cities as part of a campaign to encourage winter travel to Victoria.

Signals Out For Two Days

Traffic lights at Blanshard and Fairfield will be out Thursday and Friday while a control device and pole are replaced.

And only one lane inbound will be open on Douglas at Queens, a spokesman for the Victoria traffic departament said today. The one-lane situation should last about three weeks while city crews do sewer work.

'Key Question is Response Time'

Saanich is not convinced that a provincial takeover of the municipal ambulance service would be in the best interests of residents, Mayor Mel Couvelier said today.

Couvelier said he will tell the provincial cabinet when it meets at Saanich municipal hall Thursday.

He considers the subject important enough for it to occupy the entire time allotted to Saanich for presentation of a brief.

Couvelier said that discussions have been held in the last month between municipal officials and representatives of the provincial emergency health services commission, on the implications of the municipal ambulance service being discontinued.

On the basis of the information provided, he said, Saanich believes "the service they (the commission) are offering would be inadequate and unacceptable."

"The key question is response time," he added.

"If the provincial service is not going to improve the response time for Saanich residents, as chief executive officer for the municipality I cannot accept that.

"If they are talking about a decline in response time that is a serious matter the municipality is not prepared to accept."

Meanwhile, Couvelier said Saanich Fire Chief Harold Gains cannot confirm or deny charges by the Ambulance Employees Union that there was an unduly slow ambulance response to two emergency situations in Saanich.

The union said this week, in a brief to Health Minister Bob McClelland, that a heart attack victim living above a provincial ambulance station could not be helped by provincial personnel downstairs because they had to wait until an ambulance was sent from the Saanich fire department, almost 2 km away.

In another situation, the AEU said, there was an "unjustifiable time delay" when a motor-vehicle accident occurred two blocks from the same provincial station yet the Saanich ambulance was asked to respond.

Couvelier said the specific situations are difficult to investigate because the fire chief has no dates to go on.

But Gains has commented that previous allegations of confusion in responding to calls have been shown to be "unfounded," Couvelier said.

The AEU's brief cited the Saanich examples in claiming that jurisdictional disputes have led to situations where nearby provincial facilities were bypassed in favor of municipal ambulance services.

The union called for all ambulance services to be placed under the jurisdiction of the provincial ambulance agency.

Cut-Rate Canada Travel Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — Government and industry tourism officials moved Tuesday to promote more travel by Canadians at home through a package of new low-cost tours.

The program, which involves the country's two major airlines, Air Canada and CP Air, as well as railways, hotel chains and travel agents, was announced following a one-day federal-provincial tourism ministers' meeting. (See also Page 21.)

The ministers agreed at a news conference after the meeting that the program, which includes 54 tours, will not wipe out the Canada's estimated $1.7 billion 1977 travel deficit but will attract more Canadians to vacations within the country.

Industry officials said it is difficult at this point to put any dollar value on the plan.

The over-all program is to be promoted by extensive advertising in the coming weeks, industry officials said.

Among the programs are:

—Air-tour packages offered by CP Air and CP Hotels which combine domestic charter class air fares with accommodations and tour facilities priced at 30 to 40 per cent below normal.

—Train, bus and cruise tours promoted by government-owned VIA Rail Canada. The company is offering 12 tours, with at least one in every province.

—Air Canada will offer travel plans allowing tourists to rent apartments in some cities.

A discussion paper presented earlier in the day to the ministers cited rapid advances in Canadian wage and price costs as major factors in the increase of the travel deficit.

Between 1961 and 1975, Canada had a surplus on its travel account with the U.S., the paper said. But between 1973 and 1976, Canadian average hourly earnings in the hotel, restaurant and tavern business rose by 53 per cent compared with 23 to 26 per cent in the U.S.

Devaluation of the dollar last year had partially corrected that but wage costs were still 20 per cent higher in Canada, the study said.

The result by 1975 was a reversal of the surplus on travel account with the U.S. by last year, the deficit with the U.S. had reached $800 million.

Horner said the ministers agreed that governments should "review policies on wage rates in the hospitality industry."

He cited in particular the payment of premium wage rates to employees who work on statutory holidays. Some employees receive two-and-a-half times regular pay and Horner said the practice should be re-examined.

BEER PRICE HIKED

The cost of drinking beer went up eight per cent today for fans of the bottled variety and 13.2 per cent for those who prefer draught.

Beer by the case now is $4.64, up 29 cents from $4.35. The price includes the 60-cent deposit for the bottles.

Later this week, beer by the glass will go as high as 50 cents, up from a range of 35 cents to 45 cents.

Bottled beer in pubs is expected to rise to at least a dollar.

The increases are due to a price hike by breweries which has been approved by the provincial Liquor Distribution Branch.

Lloyd Manuel, manager of the B.C. Hotels Association, said members will be encouraged to pass the increases through at the retail level and not try to absorb the costs. An official announcement of the new price structure is expected Thursday.

In Victoria, Gordon Card, manager of the Colony Motor Inn, said he expects he will have to increase his price for draught beer to 50 cents a glass from 45 cents.

Bottled beer, he said, likely would go to one dollar from 95 cents.

"We can't afford to absorb cost increases with labor costs rising the way they are. We are into a new contract period in June,"

Card said the tipping structure might be altered temporarily with beer prices going to even amounts at 50 cents and one dollar.

"However it will all even out. There will no longer be a dime change from a dollar for two glasses of beer but on the other hand some customers tell the waiter to have a beer himself and now this tip will be 50 cents instead of 45 cents."

Card said some hotel managers would prefer to see a floating price for beer instead of strict controls.

Kingsview Bankrupt In Duncan

A 1,200-lot subdivision project near Duncan has been abandoned by Kingsview Properties Ltd. of Vancouver, leaving $650,000 owed to a number of contractors.

The Mount Tzouhalem project on Maple Bay Road southeast of the city was to include apartments and townhouses as well as the 1,200 single-family homes.

Liens have been filed by Wilson Contracting Ltd. and Chew Excavating Ltd. of Victoria as well as by Discovery Land Service Ltd. of Duncan.

Work began a year ago on installing services in the area.

MP Charged

OTTAWA (CP) — Charges have been laid against David Rooney, a Newfoundland Liberal MP following an investigation ordered by Commons Speaker James Jerome. Jerome did not specify the charge, but it is believed to be influence-peddling.

OTTAWA FAVORS ONTARIO

Steel Beam Levy Hitting B.C. Firms

A political storm is brewing over a new federal import duty on steel beams that MPs say favors Ontario industry, especially Algoma Steel Corp. Ltd., at the expense of British Columbia industry and jobs.

The chief vocal opponent of the duty in Parliament has been Ron Huntington (PC—Capilano) who said Tuesday the duty will mean economic disaster for B.C. and underlines "a lack of regional brokerage in the political system."

Huntington said his Conservative colleagues representing Ontario constituencies, wish he would shut up because they have steel and related industry and jobs to protect.

The 30-per-cent duty, on top of a previous 10-per-cent import charge, applies to wide flange steel beams used in heavy construction such as office buildings, industrial plants and bridges. Main exporters to Canada are Britain, France, Japan, South Africa and Luxembourg.

The western MPs say they are angry because B.C. consumers have to pay the duty despite the province never having been a significant market for Algoma, based in Sault Ste. Marie. Algoma is the only Canadian producer of wide flange steel.

Cyril Symes (NDP—Sault Ste. Marie) said in an interview exempting B.C. "might be a compromise solution."

But Symes did not want the government to lose sight of the fact the decision was made because foreigners are dumping the product on the Canadian market at prices so low Algoma cannot compete. This jeopardized Ontario jobs.

The B.C. MPs, the provincial government, industry and union spokesmen, who fear the loss of at least 2,000 jobs because of the duty, say Algoma has traditionally been unable to meet B.C. demand for the beams.

Dominion Bridge, one of Algoma's former subsidiaries in B.C., used to import steel products from Japan too, before it closed a year or two ago.

POST OFFICE STRIKERS BACK

Canadian Press

Postal maintenance workers in Toronto, London, Ont., and Laval, Que., returned to work today after a one-day strike. But all 13 maintenance workers at the main post office in downtown Montreal called in sick.

One union official in Toronto said that although most maintenance workers were on the job today, rotating strikes to protest delays in reaching a new contract with the federal treasury board might spread to smaller centres.

The 1,100 maintentance workers in the country, members of the general labor and trades branch of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, maintain and service automatic mail-sorting equipment and post office vehicles. They have been without a contract for a year.

In Ottawa, Postmaster-General Jean-Jacques Blais said he supports the treasury board's position in the dispute.

BILLBOARD MESSAGE can't help this Kitchener, Ont., motorist and his frozen, stalled car no matter how hard he might wish it. The auto had come to a shuddering halt in front of the Air Canada sign.

Pen Siege Drags On

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Negotiations for the surrender of five prisoners and their 10 hostages at the British Columbia penitentiary continue without the lawyer who has been representing the hostage-takers.

Lawyer Marguerite Jackson said Tuesday night she had been prevented by RCMP negotiators from seeing her clients and will be denied access until the prisoners have surrendered.

RCMP Insp. Les Holmes said Ms. Jackson would not be involved in a meeting that was to be held today between three prisoners and RCMP negotiators.

RCMP Supt. Bruce Northorp and RCMP S. Sgt. Chuck Hutchinson met with prisoners Ralph Saumer and David Bennett Tuesday night, shortly before Ms. Jackson said she had been denied access to her clients since arriving at the prison Tuesday morning.

"I spoke to S. Sgt. Hutchinson who advised me that the RCMP were not prepared to let me speak to my clients again and that this position would continue until the arrest and surrender of all hostages and hostage-takers. No reason was given for the position."

Ms. Jackson said Bennett asked her Saturday to represent him, Saumer, convicted murderer Andy Bruce, Richard Wright and Steven Albert Hall. The request came shortly after they had seized 13 hostages in an aborted breakout from the maximum-security prison.

Three women hostages have since been released, leaving two male prisoners, one male visitor and seven female visitors held in the visitors' area of the 100-year-old institution.

Northorp confirmed speculation Tuesday that the five hostage-takers and some of their hostages had been involved in a conspiracy to stage an escape, which was

Tel Talks Nearly Scuttled

Negotiations aimed at ending the B.C. Telephone Co. dispute were almost disrupted Tuesday when six Telecommunications Workers Union pichets followed two company supervisors to a downtown Vancouver hotel where talks were being held.

The report of industrial inquiry commissioner Justice Henry Hutcheon of the B.C. Supreme Court has provided the basis for negotiating sessions which include federal mediator Mike Collins.

Justice Hutcheon made specific recommendations for the first two years of the contract but made only suggestions for the third in his report.

Meanwhile, in Victoria union officials turned down a request to allow supervisors to instal additional phones and equipment in Memorial Arena for the Canadian figure skating championships which began today.

Jack Sambrooke, president of the TWU's Victoria local, said such requests are granted only in emergencies or in instances of very special need.

He said the union considers the additional equipment not absolutely necessary for the staging of the championships.

ICBC Boss Definite: McGeer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Education Minister Pat McGeer said Tuesday a United States citizen hired as president of the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia will start work in March, despite complaints from immigration officials McGeer that has yet to prove a Canadian could not fill the position.

McGeer declined comment about a statement that he failed to supply immigration authorities with information about the search for an executive to head ICBC.

Ian Thompson, director-general of the B.C.-Yukon area of the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission, said McGeer has not supplied immigration authorities with details of the search.

However, McGeer said Robbie Sherrell, the American hired, at a salary of $80,000 a year to head ICBC, will start work March 1.

Sherrell, executive director for Europe of the Hartford Insurance group, is an American who makes his home in Pulborough, England.

Immigration authorities have the right to veto working clearance for Sherrell if they are not satisfied that a Canadian citizen could not handle the job.

Last March, the city of Prince George advertised for a building inspector for 14 months throughout Canada but found no suitable applicant. The city hired Sid Jones, a British citizen, who arrived in Prince George to take up his post but was then refused clearance to work by Canada Manpower.

Manpower said the city should have listed the vacancy with its professional services instead of hiring outside the country.

Ottawa Plans to Offer 60,000 Student Jobs

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — A $96.2-million program to create an estimated 60,000 summer jobs for students in federal departments across Canada and to place more than 250,000 students in positions in the private sector was announced today by Bud Cullen, federal minister of employment and immigration.

The summer youth employment program will offer job opportunities in various government fields, such as tourism in national parks, wildlife management and healthcare organizations.

Canada Employment and Immigration Commission will co-ordinate the activities of the 10 federal departments participating in the program.

As in the past, the commission also will operate about 300 Canada Manpower centres to help place students in jobs in the private and public sector.

Meanwhile, Statistics Canada reported Thursday that the number of available jobs in the final three months of 1977 averaged 36,700, down 30 per cent from the figure for the third quarter of last year.

The job vacancy average was also nine per-cent lower than in the final quarter of 1976.

In December, there were 882,000 unemployed persons across the country.

Nationally, there were only four vacancies for every 1,000 existing jobs in the fourth quarter of 1977, Statistics Canada said. That compared with six in the third quarter and five a year earlier.

ANOTHER 'HOT' SCRAP FOUND

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Another radioactive segment from a downed Soviet nuclear-powered satellite has been found on lake ice in Great Slave Lake, it was announced here today.

The radioactive segment was found near two segments of the satellite—one of them radioactive and the other not—recovered Tuesday.

Major Barry Frewer, Canadian Forces information officer, said officials of the Atomic Energy Control Board (AECL) and nuclear-response team members were to leave here today aboard two Canadian Forces Twin-Otter aircraft to attempt to recover the second radioactive object.

The two segments found Tuesday—now held in this territorial capital—were about 24 kilometres northwest of Fort Reliance. The second radioactive object was found about three kilometres east of the earlier segments.

Meanwhile, a Canadian Forces C-130 Hercules transport aircraft was scheduled to arrive here today to take the two objects found Tuesday back to CFB Namao near Edmonton, headquarters for the search operation.

The two segments will be placed in lead casings aboard the aircraft. After they are taken to Namao, they may be sent to the AECL laboratory at Chalk River, Ont.

Fox Kept Mum About Forgery

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Francis Fox passed an RCMP security check and entered cabinet as solicitor-general 16 months ago without telling police or Prime Minister Trudeau that he once forged a name on a hospital document to help a lover get an abortion.

Trudeau told the Commons Tuesday he always asks the national police force to screen potential candidates for high office, asking them to produce any files or allegations that might affect the appointment.

"This procedure was followed in the case of Mr. Fox," Trudeau said.

Trudeau said he learned Jan. 18, in a letter from a private citizen passed on by his principal secretary James Coutts, that Fox had signed the name of his lover's husband on a hospital admitting document to help the woman get an abortion.

Fox, Trudeau said, considered his actions "purely private matters, personal matters, and he did not feel that the implications were such that he should not join the cabinet."

The Quebec Bar Association, meanwhile, will not say if any investigation is planned into the Fox case.

No Hero, Says Druggist

Pharmacist Henry Heggelund who wrestled a gunman to the floor and held him for police Tuesday night says he's no hero.

Heggelund said a man who appeared to be under the influence of drugs or liquor had been hanging about for some 20 minutes.

When the store was about to close at 9.30 p.m., the man pulled a gun.

But Heggelund wrenched it out of his hand, wrestled the man down and knelt on him while police were called.

"I wouldn't have done this if it wasn't obvious I could get the gun. There was no danger involved," Heggelund insisted.

Police arrested a 32-year-old Duncan man and charged him with attempted armed robbery and possession of stolen property.

They said the gun was a .22 calibre starting pistol.

"He (the bandit) asked what I would think if he had come in to rob the store and what would I say if he had a gun under his belt," Heggelund said today.

"I said I didn't think it would be very good and he started to pull the gun out of his belt. I wrenched it out of his hand and got him on the floor."

Heggelund said the man's reactions were not very good.

"If he had pulled the gun at some distance and pointed it at me I wouldn't have tried to get it."
